Stalin Not Coming Paradise, New Style Have Your Bones Nailed Who Runs the Rackets?

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International Copyright and all other rights reserved.)

Morning newspapers said Stalin, ill, was coming here to be cured by the Mayo Brothers, of Minnesota, or Johns Hopkins. He was to instruct Communists in the United States to make no fuss over him, and go home cured.

The Russian embassy says: "Nothing in the story," first printed in the Novoye Russkoye Slovo, Russian language paper. It seemed improbable that Stalin would place himself in the hands of "medical science" supported by "American capitalism," but many Americans would be interested in a "close-up" of the man who succeeds Ivan the Terrible, Peter the Great, and the more recent wrecking czars, as absolute ruler of all the Russias.

In New York state, 30,000 acres of unprofitable farm and woodland are set aside as game preserves to create a "paradise for hunters." Paradise has been differently described.

Buddha called his "Nirvana," which meant "nothingness," absence of sin and worry.

Mohammed promised that every good fighting Moslem in Heaven would be thirty feet tall, always young, with plenty of wine, milk, honey, surrounded by obliging and beautiful young ladies made of solid musk, not including his wife.

A "paradise for hunters," where the fortunate may enjoy killing their lowly animal brothers, seems a queer paradise for civilized man. The red Indians had it, in their "happy hunting ground," provided by the Great Spirit.

If in an overgrown jungle of Peru you dug up an ancient hip bone, or broken parts mixed together, you might say "how primitive."

American surgeons in Philadelphia learn that the best plan, with a thigh bone, broken near the hip socket, is to nail the pieces together, instead of pulling the patient in a plaster cast. Nailing the bones means recovery in four to five weeks; a plaster cast means six months. The simplest way is often the best.

Young Mr. Dewey, busy in New York cleaning out rackets and discouraging criminals, including some lawyers, understands his business. He transferred the smart vice racketeer from his lucrative job to a long prison term, and his latest bit of fourteen men, indicted by the grand jury, include labor union officials, lawyers, gangsters and representatives of employers, engaged in blackmailing 300 restaurants, besides stealing $240,000 from union funds.

One lawyer, Abraham Cohen, is under $100,000 bail; Irving Epstein, business agent of the Restaurant Union, is under $50,000 bail; Harry A. Vogelstein, lawyer, is out on $20,000 bail; others accused are Philip Grossell, bail, $50,000; Charles R. Hourn, president of a restaurant, bail, $50,000; John J. Williams, a union business agent, bail, $50,000; Max Finnel, labor union president, bail, $50,000.

All these gentlemen may be innocent, as they say, but Mr. Dewey is to be congratulated on giving them a chance to prove it, and to see whether they will be able to catch the five others who ran away.

Labor union men are interested in eliminating union officials and union lawyers accused of working criminal rackets and, incidentally, stealing union funds. Unions would not last long on that basis. The one little restaurant-union lawyer racket, according to Prosecutor Dewey, paid $2,000,000 a year profit.

Business is picking up, with Uncle Sam's tax collectors.

In July, August and September they collected more than one thousand million dollars, or one hundred and sixty four millions more than they collected in the same months last year. Tom Reed, who used to be speaker of the House and fight against spending, will open his eyes if he hears of this, in Heaven. In his day five hundred million was enough to run the entire government for a whole year, pensions and all, and that was called "reckless extravagance." We live and learn.

A well-meaning orchestra leader says all orchestras should refrain from playing martial music, thus "preventing another international war."

This country might give up wartime music and settle down to sweet, gentle crooning, but would that help against other countries, preferring martial tunes? The old kings knew that to encourage good fighting you must make it attractive. They gave drums, fifes and fighting music to soldiers, and fancy uniforms.

If anything happens to you in

Smith of New York is shown in this exclusive Soundphoto as he arrived in Chicago today. He is in Chicago to deliver another address tonight on why he "took a walk" from the New Deal in favor of the G. O. P. presidential nominee, Governor Alfred M. Landon.

POLICE SAY WIDOW'S SLAYER BURNED DIARY

BARE THREAT SENT WOMAN AND LYONS

The much-sought "whoopee" diary of murdered Mrs. Grayce Griffin Asquith was burned by her killer.

He destroyed it in the fireplace of the victim's home because it contained an entry, dated August 31, naming him and telling of threats which he had made against the lives of the "Merry Widow" of Weymouth and her Back Bay war veteran admirer, John Albert Lyons, now mysteriously missing.

New evidence, seeming definitely to establish these facts, was in the hands of police today.

They considered this evidence as important enough to charge with the state's most bizarre and baffling homicide in years was revealed October 5 by the discovery

ROOSEVELT IN CT., PLEDGES FLOOD AID

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

On tour with President Roosevelt, Oct. 22 — A pledge of federal funds for states' plans to stem the spring floods of the Connecticut river was the President's parting gesture today as he ended his two-day campaign tour through three New England states.

He made that pledge at Hartford where some 60,000 persons gathered to hear him speak in Bushnell Park, in the shadow of the state capitol.

He repeated it again at New Haven where a throng nearly as large listened to the concluding address of the Rhode Island-Massachusetts-Connecticut tour.

Then his motorcade sped down

Needham Heights Stills Seized by G-Men, Police

Rousing a judge from bed at 3 a. m. to issue a search warrant, Police Chief Arthur P. Bliss of Needham, with a detail of police and federal agents, then raided a house in Wooster street, Needham Heights, today.

The party arrested one man, seized two stills, 5000 gallons of molasses and mash and 200 gallons of alcohol, police reported.

The man arrested gave the name of Gaetano Rinaldo of Pierce street, Boston. He was held for arraignment before the United States commissioner.

Chief Bliss said that the judge who issued the search warrant is one of the jurors of Dedham district court, but he declined to give his name.

Five Needham police and an equal number of federal agents from the alcohol tax enforcement bureau took part in the surprise raid.

Police said that, while the house presented a domestic appearance from the outside—with lace curtains on the windows—there were few pieces of furniture.

Deal Spoils' System Hit By Landon

Aboard Landon Sunflower Special, En Route to Oklahoma City, Oct. 22 (INS)—Appealing again for non-partisan support of his presidential campaign, Governor Alfred M. Landon today fired another broadside at the New Deal, charging its underlying motive was to regiment the individual and curb his liberties.

The Republican nominee was speeding eastward along the old Santa Fe trail en route to renew his campaign in the east.

A sore throat curtailed many of his "rear porch" talks.

After speaking last night in Phoenix, Ariz., his next scheduled address was in Oklahoma City tomorrow morning.

The Governor spent hours in his private car working on the major addresses he will deliver in Indianapolis, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, New York city and St. Louis.

Only one subject was revealed—a denunciation of the Roosevelt administration for an "influx of spoilsmen into the government" and its alleged failure to maintain the merit system among federal employes.

MAPS SURPRISE TOPICS

Landon apparently has decided to surprise his political opponents with the topics of his closing speeches. This would be in line with the surprise announcement of his "victory dash" to Maine earlier

Al Smith Hailed In Chicago on Radio Visit

Chicago, Oct. 22 (AP)—Former Governor Al Smith of New York, who "took a walk" from the ranks of the Roosevelt supporters, was given a tumultuous reception, in which boos vied with cheers, as he arrived today for an address tonight in behalf of the Republican presidential nominee.

The 1928 Democratic standard-bearer walked from the train into the La Salle street station. A crowd which overflowed onto the street and beyond sent up a shout of approval. Then came boos, nearly equalling the cheers in volume.

Escorted by ten motorcycle policemen, Smith was driven to a hotel, where the presidential suite had been reserved for him.

Smith maintained a solemn mood at a press conference, where he told interviewers he was "tired of campaigning."

He declined to make any election predictions, even in his home state, where he said he didn't know how the election would go but remarked that New York "has always been a Republican state."

HAIGIS LASHES DEAL'S 'MISLEADING PROPAGANDA'

'REAL JOBS AT REAL WAGE,' REPUBLICAN PLEDGE

By L. CONANT, JR.

John W. Haigis, Republican gubernatorial nominee, struck out today at the "misleading propaganda of the Roosevelt regime" and sounded a ringing reminder of the Republican promise of "a real job at real wages."

"The New Dealers," he said, "have tried to create the impression that the Republicans are not interested in relief and re-employment.

"They have disregarded the record of eleven million men still unemployed despite the billions spent by the present administration.

"The Republican party, under the leadership of Gov. Landon, is determined that the problem of relief shall be returned to those most capable of handling it—the local authorities.

"Gov. Landon has said that no man will starve. He has promised that no man must sell his vote for bread.

STATE G. O. P. PLEDGE

"The Republican ticket of Massachusetts is pledged to work trial recovery in this state so for the revival of sound industhat thousands now on relief may once more be given the chance for a real job at real wages.

"The Republican ticket has pledged itself to co-operate toward the goal of removing the discriminatory policies of the New Deal that has seen the working men and women of Massachusetts sacrificed at the expense of returning prosperity to foreign nations.

"The Republican ticket is composed of men familiar with the problems and difficulties besetting their state. They will work to the end that Massachusetts once again gets her fair share."

SCORES HURLEY

At rallies in Everett, Malden, Melrose and Medford, Haigis charged that his New Deal opponent, State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley has not given "one public utterance to indicate his disapproval of the present administration."

"Daily," he said, "Mr. Hurley is soliciting the support of the voters not only for himself but also for the governor.

"No one likes to get caught in the performance of an act that is based on misrepresentation. Then it is that the squirming starts. Every effort is made to get out from under—to avoid responsibility—and to divert attention.

"I guarantee to stop that type of government and give you what you want more than anything else—honest, decent, orderly government."

LODGE IN DIONNE TRIBUTE

In an address broadcast to the Franco-American dinner at the Boston City Club from the Everett rally, Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., Republican Senatorial nominee, paid high tribute to the late Oscar D. Dionne, of New Bedford.

"From a humble beginning, he said, "Mr. Dionne elevated himself to positions of trust and responsibility in the public service.

"The Republican party honored him two years ago by nominating him for State Treasurer and again honored him this year by giving him the convention nomination for State Auditor.

"But in conferring this honor upon him, the Republican party was honoring itself in choosing a man of such unusually fine qualifications, in choosing a man solely on the ground of merit.

"I am glad that the Republican party recognizes the fact that there is no racial barrier to public service."

SALTONSTALL AT WALTHAM

Talking before several hundred employes of the Waltham Watch Company, Leverett Saltonstall, Republican nominee for Lieutenant-Governor declared that the new tax burdens on machinery, passed this year under his leadership, reduced the tax from the regular local tax of about $40 per $1000 to a flat rate of $5 per $1000.

Slash More Names Off Vote List

Hundreds of arrests for illegal voting will be made on November 3 and this election day will go down in history as the most disgraceful in the records of the Commonwealth, Attorney George L. Raish of the Republican State Committee predicted today.

Raish, special counsel now prosecuting cases of persons alleged to be registered illegally in Ward 21, Brighton, made this forecast shortly after the Boston election commissioners had ordered 14 more names stricken from the ward's voting lists.

The summary action of the commission today brought to 35 the total of names expunged this week, but two men appeared at this hearing to appeal their cases and they will be given hearings on Monday.

PROVES RESIDENCE

Fifteen persons were summoned today to prove they were registered legally, but only one appeared. He was Maxwell Epstein of Radcliffe road, Brighton, who was able to prove satisfactorily that he resided in Commonwealth Avenue at the address from which he is registered.

Because the 14 others did not appear, their names were stricken from the lists. Six of these were women. Of the group of 21 who did not appear earlier in the week, five were women.

Those who appealed their cases were Ivers J. Rutherford of Commonwealth avenue and Frank Joseph Wright of Warren street. They claimed they were not served with summonses.

Attorney Raish asserted that "repeaters" are going to invade polling booths all over the state on election day, according to information received at Republican state committee headquarters.

URGES EARLY VOTE

"Even Democratic voters should take cognizance of this warning," he said. Every honest voter should get to the polls early to assure that his name will not be used by these frauds before he gets a chance to cast his ballot.

The fact is that repeaters vote early for one or two choice candidates and when the rest of the ticket blank, on that even certain of the Democratic candidates are threatened with a loss of votes as a result.

There will be groups of detectives and Republican workers mobilized, however, to check the activities of the repeaters, Raish declared.

Registration Fraud Probe in New York

New York, Oct. 22 (INS) — "Fraudulent registration records continued to pile up as investigators for the Honest Ballot Association carried on their checkup in the huge Democratic districts of Manhattan, Brooklyn, the Bronx and Queens," the Evening Journal said in an exclusive story today.

The Journal said that Honest Ballot officials estimate there are at least 250,000 illegally registered voters on the election rolls in New York city. The Journal story quoted William Ziegler, chairman of the Landon-Knox clubs, as declaring:

"The palpable plot to steal the election in New York must be attributed to the New Deal influences and direction. New York's 47 electoral votes may decide this election."

LANDON FIRES BROADSIDE AT NEW DEAL

in the campaign and the suddenness of the announcement of the present transcontinental tour after a dash to California.

The Governor's train crossed into New Mexico from Arizona early this morning. His route lay along the Santa Fe trail in and out of New Mexico and Texas, with a final dash across the Texas Panhandle into Oklahoma.

It was at Phoenix he assailed the administration for attempting to regiment the American people in violation of their constitutional liberties.

Declaring the fundamental issue in the campaign transcended party lines, Landon said:

"Today the people of this country have a choice between the American system they always have known and an opposite system. This will determine whether they and their children will remain a free people, capable of self-government, or be dominated by an all-powerful central authority. We have watched this very thing happen in other nations in recent years.

"I am not questioning the humanitarian intentions of the present administration. But I do wish to point out the threatening character of the means the administration uses to carry out its intentions.

"There can be no question as to the road down which we are being led. Regimentation of the individual and curb of his liberties underlie every one of the New Deal's plans. They have allowed nothing to deter them in their plan to make over our political, social and economic life.

CONSTITUTION THREAT

"The Supreme Court already has ruled many of these plans contrary to our Constitution. Unfortunately we are left in no doubt that the present administration regards this not as an end of their efforts, but only as a minor barrier to be circumvented if it can't be bundled.

"This threatened change in our form of government is not remote. Its effect will strike directly into the homes, jobs, and lives of every one of us. The reality of it is but too well known to us."

Landon pointed out New Deal law already had told farmers what they could plant in their fields" and told workers how many hours they could stay at their looms." He added the "present administration of the grazing act is another example of federal bureaucracy run wild."

WARNS FARMERS

He warned that if such regulations were established "by one means or another, the Government would have equal power to tell a farmer to "cease farming entirely or start digging ditches" or to tell working men "to work twice their present hours at half their present pay."

"The men who framed and forced the passage of these measures have not changed their ideas," he added. "They are only biding their time until they can put them into full effect."

Mr. Roosevelt Ignores Democratic Nominees

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, seeking re-election as the Democratic Party's nominee for the Presidency, has completed a whirlwind tour of New England.

He addressed huge crowds in Providence, New Bedford, Boston and Worcester.

He greeted, briefly, thousands that lined the thoroughfares in cities and towns along the way.

In Worcester, by radio, he talked to all New England and the nation, defending his policies and promising a perpetuation of the New Deal, including its taxation.

His speeches, masterpieces of generalities that artfully dodged major issues, covered a wide ground, even going beneath it and bringing up such outstanding New England patriots as John and Samuel Adams and Daniel Webster.

BUT his speeches, however wide their ground, seemed to have no room for the Democratic Party in Massachusetts or the Democratic Party's Massachusetts candidates.

In the Presidential entourage during the day were Governor Curley, Senator Walsh, Candidate-for-Governor Charles F. Hurley and other leading Democrats.

None received mention, save Mr. Roosevelt's brief recognition of their introductory speeches.

There was no appeal to the electorate to send Governor Curley to the Senate.

There was no hint that Mr. Roosevelt would like to see Charles F. Hurley elected as the Democratic Governor of Massachusetts.

There was no verbal indication that the President wished to share the fruits of victory with any of the Democratic Party's nominees in the Bay State or in New England.

STUDENTS of political history find this significant. They remember Al Smith's remarks that it was not he who took a walk from the party, but the party that took a walk from him.

They remember Mr. Roosevelt's recent appeal to the voters of Minnesota to support the nominees of the radical Farmer-Labor Party.

They remember Mr. Roosevelt's eloquent demand that the people of Nebraska defeat Terry Carpenter, the Democratic nominee, and elect Senator Norris, Republican.

They remember Mr. Roosevelt's benediction to the LaFollette Progressives in Wisconsin.

And, remembering, they are astounded by his silence in Massachusetts.

IN his New England determination to make the campaign all Roosevelt and all New Deal, the President has apparently written an emphatic yes to the charges of Al Smith and the other Jeffersonian Democrats who are supporting Governor Landon.

Mr. Roosevelt, having repudiated the entire Democratic Party's platform of four years ago, is now doing what amounts to a repudiation of the Democratic Party itself.

When he needs their support, he never hesitates to lend his voice to the political aspirations of the radical Republican, the Communist-tainted Farmer-Laborite, the LaFollette Progressive or the Independent.

But when he thinks he can do without a Democrat, however loyal to the party the man may be, the President, obviously, says nothing about him.

If Al Smith and his Jeffersonians are walking in one direction, Mr. Roosevelt appears to be running in the opposite direction.

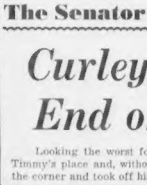
The Senator Says:

Curley on Short End of Big Bet

Looking the worst for wear, the Senator gum-shoed into Timmy's place and, without a glance at Timmy, went over in the corner and took off his rubbers.

"What's the idea, Senator?" asked Timmy. "It ain't raining."



The Senator

"I took 'em off, didn't I?" retorted the Senator.

"Well, what did you wear them for in the first place?" quipped Timmy, with a wry look.

"It was raining when I left home," said the Senator, a little sheepishly. "If you want to be argumentative and say it hasn't rained since Saturday, why go ahead and say it. I've been busy."

"You have been busy doing what, and what will you have?" said Timmy.

"I have been busy running down some of these wager stories and I will have a glass rinsed and filled and filled with sherry," said the senator.

Big Bad Wolves

"If you've got time perhaps you would care to hear the story of the gentleman-in-waiting and the big bad wolves. It is not a fairy tale but it deserves a place in the folk lore of this campaign."

"Yes, I have time," responded Timmy, inviting the bitters in the wine glass with an expert gesture that opened the Senator's eyes. "I have time but I cannot go where I want, so I will listen to your story."

"I know you have heard of Suissie Sullivan," said the Senator. "He was a boxing promoter at one time, as you may recall, and now he is known officially as Mr. Sullivan and unofficially as a gentleman-in-waiting to Governor Jim.

"Well, I don't know whether Mr. Sullivan has discovered a gold mine or not but I have just learned on good authority that he has only recently wagered no less than $15,000 on the chances of Governor Jim in the coming election.

"Needless to say, Suissie is on the short-end of the reputed wagger. The other end of it amounts to $20,000, according to my information, and the man on that end is said to be Sam Goodwin, uncle of Leo Schwartz, who once upon a time was legal adviser to Police Commissioner Eugene Christian Hultman. And what a time that was, what barkin days those were—for the press, I mean, with Beano Breen going to court for his doors every time Commissioner Hultman's men took them away.

"The fact must be, of course, that neither one is putting up his own dough, but it really would be beyond my powers of ratiocination to guess who is really betting on Lodge and who is picking Curley.

"However, and here is where the shoe is going to pinch, neither one of them knows that the special agents of the Treasury Department were tipped off on their meeting and were within earshot when the matter was discussed, so whichever side wins, one side or the other is going to get a tax bill and you Uncle Samuel is going to collect."

"Somebody ought to tip them off," said Timmy.

"Somebody is sure to," replied the Senator, "but please be kind enough not to interrupt me."

"Well, look—" began Timmy.

"I asked you not to interrupt," said the Senator. "I am not through with my story."

"But I was only going to tell you—"

"Please, please," insisted the Senator. "There will be time enough for you to interrupt when I am through. Here is the rest of the story.

Soft Sawbuck

"I understand that Mr. Sullivan has already picked up a soft sawbuck from Charlie Manson, ardent supporter of the gentlemen that Suissie generally refers to as 'the other side' when he wishes to be polite.

"As I heard it, they were going to put stakes amounting to $500 in the hands of a stakeholder and they put up a sawbuck apiece as an indication of their good intentions. But when Charlie showed up with a check for $500, Mr. Sullivan declined to honor it, pointing out it was post-dated and he snapped up the sawbuck before you could wink an eye.

"Incidentally the check bore the signature of one high in the councils of the Republican state committee, one whose check would be honored wherever bankers meet, so the incident hurt Mr. Manson more than a little and I daresay it may end the 'ribbing' to which, I hear, Mr. Manson has subjected Mr. Sullivan in the past."

"Now, Timmy, my boy, I am ready to listen to what you have to say."

"Well, it is raining," said Timmy, "I thought you'd like to know."

"Tut, tut," said the Senator. "May I remind you that I brought my rubbers?"

"You may," said Timmy. "And that is what I was going to remind you of a little while back. Somebody has walked off with your rubbers."

Wreckage—Once an Auto—in Which One Died, One Hurt

Twisted remains of the automobile which crashed into a New Haven train at a grade crossing in South Bellingham today, killing one man and causing serious injuries to another. Curious are looking over the automobile wreckage. The machine crashed into the second car of the Boston bound train, after skidding more than 100 yards. The picture is a grim reminder for all motorists to stop, look and listen at all grade crossings.

CURLEY Asks Pardon FOR TRIO

GIRLS JAILED FOR MILK THEFT

Full pardons for three Lowell girls, sentenced to indefinite terms at Sherborn Reformatory for stealing two quarts of milk when they were hungry, were recommended to the Executive Council by Governor Curley today.

The three motherless girls, Helen Maher, 18, Catherine Groton, 18, and Winifred Riley, 19, have been at Sherborn since early in September, following imposition of sentence by Judge Frederick A. Fisher, 81, permanent justice at Lowell District Court.

The governor's action follows a complete investigation of the case by Commissioner of Corrections Arthur T. Lyman, in which the latter characterized the punishment as far outweighing the seriousness of the crime and recommended a full pardon to erase the stigma of a court and jail record from the girls' lives.

Parents of the three girls are also anxious to have them return home and have denied reports that the trio were unmanageable.

Judge Fisher, criticised severely for his action by Governor Curley, continues to maintain silence in the case.

1 Dead, 1 Hurt As Train, Auto Crash

South Bellingham (10:25 AM)—A grade crossing more than 100 feet in a vain effort to stop a car crashed into a fast-moving Rockhaven-to-Boston train at the Elm street crossing here today, killing one man and seriously injuring another.

Minutes after the fatal accident, Special Officer Joseph Hamel of the Boston & Maine railroad police department, who investigated the accident, said that the driver of the car, Alexander Manzo, 40, of Rockhaven street, Woonsocket, R. I., was dead.

Leslie Labonne, 19, of Hotel street, Woonsocket, was instantly killed the way the car struck, Officer Hamel declared. The other occupant of the car, Edward Randolfino, was taken to Woonsocket Hospital, suffering from a fractured left leg and contusions of the head and body.

The train was leaving the station as it approached the crossing, and was just getting under way when the car came across the tracks. The train was unable to stop before pulling the car for a short distance.

According to police, Labonne was operator of the machine.

FUR FLIES HIGH IN NEW HAT, COAT, SUIT STYLE

A tidal wave of black Persian and silver fox swept into the French Room of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, yesterday, and broke with pleasant fury over a group of the season's most exciting fashions.

For was all over the place—artfully speaking — in rhythmic bands on flaring and fitted coats, on collars, sleeves and pockets—even on mad little hats.

Twenty-one wider tests—new and unusual—were displayed by the mannequins for the coveted black-and-silver Fashion Congress tags. They are now on display at various shops and stores. Pictures of the winners will appear daily on the fashion pages of the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser.

Those shown are: Jordan Marsh Company, Filene's, Manahan's, R. H. White Company, Perkins Brothers, E. T. Slattery Company, Kennedy's, William Filenes Sons' Company, Columbia's and Lambes and Bedford.

The four society mannequins who were chosen to model this week's fashions were Miss Carolina Overson, Miss Polly Keppler, Miss Mopsy and Miss Morrison.

The lavishly fur-trimmed coats caused the first controversy of the season. Some argued that the distance mannequin appeared to be black Persian, others, with a sensible female flair, were convinced it was Pan color of Persian lamb.

Commenting for buyers in the same fashion division was a buying coat with a coloresque band at the bottom of nutria in front. The model was modeled by Miss Mary Morrison of Beacon Hill.

It's much too theatrical look.

Trim Coat Praised

The trim little coat with its youthful, native lines, received enthusiastic praise, however.

A coat which was fashioned to resemble a two-piece suit, was only a started point.

Costumes which won the approval of the judges were awarded Fashion Congress tags. They are now on display at various shops and stores. Pictures of the winners will appear daily on the fashion pages of the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser.

Brown proved to be the "dark horse" among the color surprises.

Color, as a whole, however, seems no doubt that black is still the all-time favorite in winter.

Four motherless children of a Fall River Chinese won leniency for their father in federal court today.

"This man has been in jail three months awaiting trial," said Assistant U. S. Attorney McCarthy. "He is the father of four motherless children, the oldest 16 and the youngest 6. It was because of his love for the children that he got into this trouble. Up to the time of committing this one mistake his reputation was of the best."

Probe of Wally's Virginia Divorce Still Mystery

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 22 (INS)—The mystery as to who is behind the investigation of Mrs. Wallis Spencer-Simpson's divorce from Commander Earl Winfield Spencer, U. S. N., remained a secret today.

Numerous copies of the court records of the case have been made by Washington attorneys who declined to reveal the identity of their client. Nor would they say whether an attempt is to be made to set aside the divorce.

Irrespective of what is behind the investigation, the divorce is perfectly legal and valid, State Senator Aubrey Weaver who represented Mrs. Simpson in the divorce proceedings here nine years ago, declared.

Commenting on the investigation of the divorce, Senator Weaver said today:

"There can be no question as to its legality. Mrs. Simpson lived more than a year in Virginia and was qualified to apply for a divorce."

Despite this, private detectives have been here for the past two weeks, it was learned, tracing down all the facts concerning Mrs. Simpson's residence there.

SLAYER OF WIDOW BURNED DIARY

of a woman's legs and lower torso in Boston harbor.

That the fourth's diary contained to have contained enough to weigh half a dozen bodies, had been added to the apparent pirates today by a report from the state police crime laboratory.

According to the report, chemical and microscopic examination of ashes from the kitchen stove and fireplace showed that a book bound in green leather had been burned, but not completely consumed to the flames.

There remained nearly inch-square scraps of the green leather itself, and fragments of gilt lettering.

The lettering, being five-sixteenths of an inch high, could only be spelled out in part, by the police experts.

They said it had been unmistakably the word "diary."

Fluffiness of a part of the file, police added, indicated 16 or more thicknesses of the paper, much of the material burned had been paper, torn to bits before.

The microscope confirmed this deduction.

Chemical analysis of the ashes showed them to have been left as a fire kindled on or near after the night of Sunday, the 18th, since ashes of the Merry Widow singing.

TEARS OUT LEAVES

Police, from circumstantial events of the murder night, were able today to picture the slayer painstakingly destroying the diary by ripping out its pages, tearing and burning them, and finally, when the stove was too crowded by the huge book's leather binding, which of itself he must have, to destroy, would set incendiary fire.

The seven fire, however, could quite eliminate accusation that the book had been poked, and, in the diary by Mrs. Asquith on August 28, but quite a month before her violent death.

To the August 21 entry, "Merry Widow allegedly named a man who has been subpoenaed in the present investigation of the slaying.

It was told of that man's presence at her cottage the night before, when a party that had started gaily, with several couples present, had broken up in a terrible fight.

THREATENED HER

The man in question had been reasonable for the trouble, she wrote, and he had left only after threatening her and threatening Lyons, of whom he was jealous.

The diary entry, of course, was destroyed when the page upon which it was written was burned.

But the substance of the entry, almost word for word, had been reported, police now know, in a letter written by Mrs. Asquith to a woman friend.

The letter, the diary entry, dated August 21.

It told of the Merry Widow's fear for herself and Lyons, and it named the man who had threatened them.

It referred to the diary and it contained the significant comment: "If anything happens, my diary will tell who ought to be blamed."

This letter, almost as valuable as the diary itself, was in police possession today.

And in testify to its genuineness police also had another letter written in answer to it. The answer was found in Mrs. Asquith's cottage.

PRESIDENT PLEDGES CASH FOR N. E. FLOOD RELIEF

through miles of highways, tunnels by brilliant automobile lighting, to Stamford, where he boarded his special train again, and sped post-haste—until morning.

"HAPPIER STATE" MESSAGE

To Connecticut was left the message that it was a "happier state than it had been in 1932." Then, incidentally, the state's eight electoral votes were cast aside in the New Deal, and it is generally conceded that they will be this year.

But what was afforded Connecticut was the fact that the four New England states—Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut—could not themselves accomplish the flood control projects they have planned.

One thing, apart from the political aspects of the situation today, was evident. That was that the hurricane, which struck this state, was permitting no interference driving by the Presidential motorcade such as greeted its invasion of Massachusetts yesterday.

A large squad of state motorcycle police kept the cars in the party a single law state constant to the hurricane precaution of weaving marshaled that caused such consternation in Massachusetts highways.

SALUTES CROWD

The President saluted crowds at Willimantic, Andover and Vernon before reaching Hartford. When he left the capital city he was greeted at Middletown and Meriden, spoke at New Haven and made appearances at Bridgeport and Norwalk as well as at Stamford.

He expressed himself as especially pleased that so many school children had turned out to cheer him as he rode today.

The President's pledge to put federal funds with state appropriations in proportion to those contributed first made at Hartford.

"I am here to talk with your officials about floods," he said, "but I am here also, I am told, as a candidate for President.

"The reason why your government in Washington has to keep in close touch with the states and cities is the fact that your river here crosses four states, the problem of floods involves more than one state."

Although he is glad that Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut are working together on the Connecticut river flood control plans, the President said they can't do the job satisfactorily without federal help.

"And I tell you that the federal government stands ready to do its share toward flood prevention in the future," he declared.

ON CAMPAIGN SPECIAL

The presidential campaign special arrived here at 8:30 from Wonsocket, where it was necessary to receive the cheers of several hundred persons lining the railroad station platform. Other hundreds were barred from the railroad yards by an especially heavy police detail.

Governor Wilbur Cross, Attorney-General Edward J. Daly and Mayor Thomas J. Spellacy of this city boarded the train to welcome the President before he made his public appearance and to talk with him about flood control plans.

When he did emerge from the railroad station, it was to motor through streets lined with men, women and children, but heavily guarded by national guardsmen, state troopers and Hartford police.

The Democratic committee in charge had the heavy guard called out to prevent duplication of the crowd difficulties in Massachusetts yesterday, where a number of persons were injured in the jams viewing the presidential party.

GOV. CROSS IN CAB

As on yesterday in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, Mrs. Roosevelt rode in the presidential automobile. Governor Cross was by her side. U. S. Senator Rice (D.), of Utah, was among the guests on the speakers' platform.

The President was quite elated today over his receptions in Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

"It has taken only one day of driving through Rhode Island and Massachusetts to prive to me that New England is in step and that on November 3 it will march with the rest of the nation," he declared.

What Landon Stands For:

The American System

GOVERNOR LANDON has devoted his campaign for the Presidency to constructive discussion of problems affecting the daily lives of the people.

He has not sought to divide the people into classes or group, encouraging one to be hostile to another.

He has not appealed to one section of the country at the expense of other sections.

Governor Landon believes the problem of existence is a national problem, affecting all the people.

Class sectional prejudices, in his belief, are harmful to every one and are alien to American principles.

Governe Landon stands for the traditional American system of permitting business to prosper in order that the people may \ gainfully employed and the products of farms and faories may be marketed profitably.

A government that stands in the way of this American method is standing between the people and the prosperity to which \ey are entitled.

Whether it tects barriers of ruinous taxation or of unjust restrictio against employing industries, it is keeping the peopaway from their rightful enjoyment of life, liberty and hpiness.

LANDON BEST CHOICE,' SAYS KPLINGER

Speaking before the lunin meeting of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Willard M. Kiger, business and political writer, today surveyed the platformpromises and performances of the two presidential candidates a concluded Governor Alfred M. Landon of Kansas is the bestnice.

Governor Landon, he said, will balance the budget by the spa of 1938, at least six months bef Roosevelt would, and wants to duce the present high taxes, wi Roosevelt is "committed to bi taxes."

President Roosevelt would se further regimentation of indus if elected and is eyeing two t three possible vacancies in t Supreme Court which would e able him to amend the Constitu tion and push through a "subs tute NRA," Kiplinger told h gathering.

"Landon could and would ba ance the budget sometime in th Spring of 1938," said Kiplinge "Roosevelt could balance th budget by that time but would probably take from six month to a year longer.

"Roosevelt is definitely headed toward some system of governmental regulation of industry—not a revival of the NRA, but a successor to NRA.

"I believe the President, if re-elected, would move in the direction of seeking amendment to the Constitution to authorize federal regulation of industrial production. I believe Landon, if President, would not do this.

"President Roosevelt is counting on having two or three vacancies in the Supreme Court to fill within the next two years."

Kiplinger also forecast a close election, with the possibility of a victory being won in the next week.

Landon Victory Sure, Declares Martin

Before returning to New York today for the wind-up of his work as manager of the eastern division of the Landon-Knox campaign, Congressman Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of North Attleboro, predicted victory for Governor Alfred M. Landon and also expressed confidence that the Republicans would have a majority in the next National House of Representatives.

"I am very confident," declared Congressman Martin, "that the final figures on November 3 will show a substantial victory for Governor Landon in the presidential contest.

"The eastern situation has been steadily improving during the last ten days. We no longer need worry about Pennsylvania. That state will go Republican by over 200,000.

"In the western part of the country, our prospects also are much brighter than they were. Michigan no longer is in doubt. We are out front in Minnesota.

"The Republican tide has increased in Wisconsin to such an extent that we have a good chance to carry that state.

"I have no doubt about the outcome of New England.

DEM. PRESSURE ADS PROBED

Washington, Oct. 22 (INS)—The Senate campaign funds committee today asked the Democratic national committee to answer charges that it violated the corrupt practices act by accepting corporate contributions under the cloak of advertising its convention book.

The committee's action was prompted by Republican accusations that big corporations were "forced" to make huge campaign contributions when "high pressure" methods were used to sell advertising.

The campaign committee sent a letter to Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley for a report on the nature of funds received from advertisers in "The Book of the Democratic National Convention of 1936." No action will be taken until a reply is received.

The Republican National Committee a few days ago submitted a sworn complaint to the committee charging that the corrupt practices act, which makes it illegal for corporations to contribute to national campaign funds, was violated.

The Republicans charged that the advertising rates were out of proportion and that the end in the corporation in reality represented gifts to the parties.

Under the law any officer of a corporation making such a contribution can be fined $1000 and sent to prison for one year.

DEMOCRATS IN TRIUMPHANT MOOD TODAY

By WILLIAM C. CONWAY

Worcester, Oct. 22—As President Franklin D. Roosevelt swung through Connecticut today in his battle to save the New England states for the Democrats, Massachusetts party leaders were jubilantly predicting victory for the entire state ticket.

Their predictions are made despite the fact that President Roosevelt failed to mention the candidacy of Governor James M. Curley and Charles F. Hurley at any time during the 16-hour campaign tour of the Bay state.

CURLEY BACK HOME

Curley, however, stood close by the President throughout the tour, but failed to appear at the railroad yards early today as the President's special pulled out of Worcester for the Connecticut trip.

Curley and his party left the Worcester Municipal Auditorium for Boston immediately after the President's address.

Before the President left the Auditorium platform, he chatted with Curley for a moment and exchanged pleasantries with State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee.

HARMONY IN RANKS

From all appearances, harmony reigned in the Democratic ranks as the State ticket candidates sat side by side with U. S. Senators David I. Walsh and Marcus A. Coolidge on the platform of the Municipal Auditorium awaiting the arrival of President Roosevelt.

Seated on the platform with Senators Walsh and Coolidge, both of whom were making their first appearances in the current campaign, were Governor Curley, State Treasurer Hurley, Francis E. Kelley, nominee for lieutenant-governor; Attorney-General Paul A. Dever, State Auditor Thomas Buckley, James M. Hurley nominee for state treasurer, and Joseph McGrath, Democratic State Committeeman.

Legion Chief Protests Radio Ruling on Reds

Special to Boston Evening American

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 22—Scathing protest against the ruling of the Federal Communications Commission that Communist candidates for office must be allowed to broadcast from all licensed radio stations has been sent to the board in Washington by Kenneth R. Murrell, third Georgia area commander of the American Legion.

Mr. Murrell's letter to the commission follows:

"Federal Communications Commission,

"Washington, D. C.

"Dear Sirs:

"As director of American Legion activities in an area that includes two Georgia congressional districts—the fifth and the tenth —I must protest vigorously against your action in ordering broadcasting stations to allow Communists the same privilege candidates of other political parties have.

"Other political parties are organized under the Constitution and laws of our country. They are committed to the American form of government and the orderly processes of a democracy.

"The Communist party is not an American political organization, but an alien group directed from Moscow. Its avowed aim is to overthrow all democracies and substitute its so-called dictatorship of the proletariat. The Communists would end the America we know and love. They would destroy our churches, break down our homes and put a stop to all individual freedom.

"World War veterans and other patriotic citizens can not understand why an agency of the United States Government grants unrestricted use of that powerful medium of communication, the radio, for propaganda aimed to foment the destruction of this very government.

"We urge you to forbid the radio to Earl Browder, the Communist candidate for President, and other enemies of our country.

"Very truly yours,

"KENNETH R. MURRELL,

Commander Third Georgia Area, American Legion."

Election Weather

Gloomy Outlook Seen for East

By DR. SELBY MAXWELL,
Noted Meteorologist

Politicians have always watched the weather on election day with intense interest. In many close elections the fate of a candidate hangs on whether it rains or not.

It is accepted as an axiom in political circles that on bad days a great many indifferent voters, women, people in poor health and what is called the unorganized vote will be apt to stay away from the polls and not vote at all.

But the machine vote, that is, the followers of organized parties and candidates and bosses will turn out to vote, rain or shine, and on bad days they quite often manage to outvote the indifferent, majority, organized vote, because it will all be in the favor of machine politics.

In the east the day will be generally gloomy and inclined to be rainy and stormy. In the west it will be clear and somewhat nicer, but the vote in these western states is not large, and all of them put together excluding, perhaps, California, can hardly outweigh the votes of half a dozen densely populated eastern states.

It happens according to the straw votes, that many of the states that will be blanketed in storm clouds on election day are also to be classed as doubtful, with the vote teetering uncertainly between the Republicans and the Democrats. It is quite conceivable that in some cases the issue may be turned in one or more states, perhaps in several, on the weather alone.

A map of the weather for election day is given here. You will see on it the indications for rain and storm in the east, and brighter and better weather in the west. Temperatures on this day will nowhere be excessive, that is, there is neither extreme cold nor extreme heat indicated for any large areas.

If I were John Hamilton, Republican campaign manager, I should insist that my organization get the vote out early and, if possible, often because, in west areas the day will get progressively worse in a weather sense as it advances. I'd redouble my get-out-the-vote efforts in all doubtful states, Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa take notice.

If I were Jim Farley, Democratic campaign manager, I would pray that this weather forecast be 100 per cent correct instead of a mere 85 per cent.

(Copyright, 1936, John F. Dille Co.)

This is a progressive weather map for election day, November 3, 1936. Shaded areas show gloomy weather conditions.

1—Great Lakes storm, getting worse as day advances.
2—Southern storm, also getting worse.
3—Clear Atlantic Sea coast clear area, getting somewhat worse.
4—Maine storm area—getting better as the day advances.
5—Western clear area—unchanged.
6—Clear area, getting worse as day advances.
7—Puget Sound stormy, light, decreasing.

What sort of a day will November 3, 1936, be? On a basis of weather who will win, Roosevelt, or Landon?

No one can be sure of who will be elected President until all the ballots are finally counted, but we can be quite sure—at least 85% sure—what sort of weather it will be throughout the United States on election day. Science provides a pretty exact answer.

The weather over the more popular parts of the country should greatly hearten the machine and

SIFT SHIPYARDS LAYOFF CHARGE

Charges of a marina workers' strike that shipyards holding government contracts, including the Bethlehem Ship Corporation, of Quincy, and the Bath Iron Works, of Bath, Me., were laying off workmen to destroy confidence in President Roosevelt were under investigation today by the Navy Department.

The charges were contained in a letter to Secretary of Labor Perkins and Secretary of the Navy Swanson from the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America.

Hundreds of shipyard workers have been laid off in the past few weeks, the letter asserted, despite the fact that shipyards are behind their construction schedule. More than $100,000,000 of uncompleted contracts are on hand, it declared.

The union also charged that workmen were being given the impression "private industry is putting them to work, while the government is turning them out on the street."

Curley Says Milk Set Price Sought

Asserting that "farmers in Massachusetts have got a raw deal for a long time," Governor Curley today told more than 200 representatives of the milk industry at the State House that plans were being speeded to "prevent price cutting and to establish a definite price of milk for farmers."

"I want to get this matter cleaned up before I get out of here," the governor said.

He instructed the State Milk Control board to furnish all the representatives present with copies of what is to be termed "the most comprehensive milk cost study" ever prepared by the state.

2500 New WPA Jobs Assured

Governor Curley today announced that Works Progress Administration funds had been allotted to employ 2500 men for the construction of edgestones and sidewalks in Massachusetts, under the control of the metropolitan district commission.

He issued the statement following a conference with acting Works Progress Administrator Paul Edward and Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman of the Metropolitan district commission.

The projects are expected to start in ten days, the governor stated.

Live Wire Burns Dedham Man

John McAleese, 44, of River street, East Dedham, was burned and nearly electrocuted today while at work in the rear of a plant on Rutherford avenue, Charlestown. He was removing a transformer and was about to pince a lash about it, when he came in contact with a live wire. He was taken to Haymarket Relief Hospital.

PENSION TAXES ACTION RUSHED

Washington, Oct. 22 (AP)—The Treasury is gradually perfecting arrangements to collect taxes under the old age pension section of the Social Security Act; but the assignment of account numbers to 26,000,000 workers covered by the law has yet to begin.

The government printing office worked today on the proposed forms under which 1 per cent of the affected employes' wages and 1 per cent of the employers' payrolls will be collected for 1937.

Treasury officials said the regulations and forms probably would not be approved or made public until late November or December.

Collections most likely will be on a monthly basis, it was said, with the assessment for January falling due the last day of February.

Today's Boondoggle

The Works Progress Administration is never happier than when it is building a band-shell somewhere for somebody, but after enjoying this particular pastime for more than a year, the officials in Washington have suddenly discovered that a mere band-shell can never fully meet the requirements of the more abundant life.

The principal difficulty appears to be that the audience must go to the band-shell, whereas, under the very minimum standards governing this more abundant life, the band-shell should go to the audience in order that the forgotten man may have music wherever he goes.

Therefore the President has approved a project calling for the construction of a portable band-shell at McAlester, Okla. A complete municipal stadium and a swimming pool go along with the band-shell as part of the same project, but as far as can be ascertained these are not portable. The cost will be $41,170 to the Federal Treasury and $8,418 to McAlester.

The project, alas, appears to have perplexed local PWA officials sorely, for, as yet, they have done nothing more than scratch their heads over it.

Scientists Hear Talks By Noted Medical Men

World Sends Delegates

Girl Students Aid With Display of Healthy Bodies

With Dr. Francis P. McCarthy presiding, a symposium on physical medicine in the study of treatment of skin troubles will mark today's closing session of the three-day meeting of the Academy of Physical Medicine at Hotel Statler.

The annual banquet was held last night after a day of activities in which numerous interesting subjects came up for discussion. During the afternoon many women attending the meeting visited the museum of fine arts.

The academy's afternoon session was marked by a discussion of trauma in industry, with Dr. Harold D. Corbusier presiding and Dr. Frederic J. Cotton, retired senior surgeon at Faulkner Hospital, illustrated his talk on the question with blackboard drawings and slides.

Salt as Poison

Other matters which engaged the attention of the assembled scientists during the afternoon included arthroplasty of the knee and the importance of physiotherapy.

The day's discussions also brought out the fact that you can be poisoned by common salt, although this is extremely rare. But, it is also a sad fact that recovery from this rare affliction is equally rare.

Dr. William J. Sharis, of Sacred Heart Hospital, Allentown, Pa., gave an illustrated talk on the first recovery from poisoning of this type in eight known cases.

A symposium on the role of physical education in medicine was also conducted with Dr. B. Tait McKenzie presiding.

Girls Aid

Dr. Abraham Myerson, famed psychiatrist, gave a talk on the physical side of neurosis while an illustrated lecture on the physical therapy of the organic diseases of the nervous system was presented by Dr. H. Houston Merritt of the Harvard Medical School.

Girl students from the Sargent School of Boston University appeared before the scientists and illustrated the asymmetry of healthy bodies as a phase of the interchange of ideas.

Hollidaysburg, Pa., Oct. 22 (AP)—J. C. Lewis, justice of the peace, acted fast when a game warden brought in the defendant and the evidence—a skunk.

'Future War Vets' Halt Activities

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 22 (AP)—The Veterans of Future Wars, its national council advised all post commanders today, has "temporarily suspended" it activities and closed its central office here.

'They Don't Loaf,' Says Edwards

Acting State Works Progress Administrator Paul Edwards registered a vigorous denial to the assertion that federal relief workers "loafed" on their jobs during a session of the school of politics conducted under the auspices of the Boston and Massachusetts Leagues of Women Voters at Hotel Sheraton.

2 Rescued at Sea After Boat Burns

New Bedford, Oct. 22—New Bedford's harbor pilot and his assistant, who drifted aimlessly in a dory for nearly three hours after being forced to abandon their burning boat, were rescued today by the crew of a coal barge heading for this port.

The rescued men, Captain Jose Gomes and his aide, Albert Machado, were heading out into the sound to bring in a tanker when a mysterious explosion in the engine of the 45-foot auxiliary cruiser set the craft afire.

TRAPPING DILLINGER MOB

War Opens By G-Men At K. C.

Melvin Purvis, chief of U. S. Department of Justice "G-men," in yesterday's installment of his own story in the Boston Evening American, told how he joined the "G-men" and captured his first criminal. In today's absorbing narrative, the captor of John Dillinger tells of the Kansas City massacre.

By MELVIN PURVIS

CHAPTER V

The turning point of the war against crime in this country came, without warning or premonitory thunder, on June 17, 1933.

It was an event as significant in its way as the defeat of Burgoyne's red coats at Saratoga, or the sullen slow advance of the United States Marines across the rock outcroppings at Belleau Wood on another bloody and ominous summer morning.

On June 17, a dusty train from the Southwest pulled into the beautiful white terminal at Kansas City with dangerous cargo aboard.

Melvin Purvis

Bald-headed Frank Nash, bank-robber and murderer, was on his way to Leavenworth prison.

He had long been the object of our search, for he had been concerned in the sensational break at the United States prison at Leavenworth, Kansas, when Warden White was shot and seriously wounded.

Shortly afterward I received a telephone call from the Special Agents who were at the prison making an investigation of the break. They informed me that an individual who said he was an Indian and called himself War Eagle, had been found to be trustworthy.

His sentence was soon to expire and when he was released, the Agents knew that he was going back to his native haunts in Oklahoma.

I was the Special Agent in charge of the Oklahoma City office at the time, and the Special Agents told War Eagle to telephone me in the event he ran across Frank Nash.

One afternoon about three o'clock War Eagle called me on the telephone. He said that he had seen Nash the night before and had made a date with him for the purpose of purchasing six ounces of morphine which Nash was to deliver "on the barrel-head" on the next evening at 7 o'clock at a house in Hominy, Oklahoma.

Special Agents and two Oklahoma City police department officers left immediately with me in an automobile headed for the Osage hills. We were joined at Hominy by other peace officers and Indian Agents.

That night we located War Eagle, brought him to our hotel room and questioned him about his alleged discovery of Nash.

Suspicions Rise

He gave a plausible story, but our suspicions were aroused when at our request he described the clothing being worn by Nash.

"He wore boots like yours, a leather-jacket like this man's, a hat like this man's, and breeches like this man's," he said, pointing each time to a different member of our group.

We felt that it was obvious that he was getting his description entirely from our apparels.

We could not dismiss the lead because of our suspicions. Several of the men present felt that the Indian was lying and that he had never seen Nash, but I was determined to see it through to the end because of the bare possibility of catching this criminal.

We secured lodging for War Eagle in the local jail for the night. I do not think he suspected it but he was to be prevented from getting away; I was determined to force him to go through with his story.

The next day was a fairly enjoyable one; all of the men in our group were fine old products of Oklahoma and the type of men one likes to have about when going on a dangerous mission.

During the day we secured a lunch and took it out in the nearby woods and ate it, and shot at targets.

At intervals, one of the group would leave to drive by the house where War Eagle said the meeting was to take place that night at seven. We did not desire to drive up in great numbers and only one man at a time made the observation.

Finally, at about 6:30 we started, with War Eagle taking the lead alone in a Ford coupe, which we later learned he had stolen. He was followed by two car-loads of men.

The first was to pass the house and stop; the second was to stop before it arrived at the house.

War Eagle's instructions were to proceed to the front door and knock. If Frank Nash came to the door, or if he saw Nash in the house, he was to give a pre-arranged signal.

About half way from the wooded section of our hiding-place in the woods to the house we were going to raid, War Eagle began to slow down, and finally I drove my car up to his and commanded him to stop.

I asked him what the difficulty was and he replied weakly that he had lost his way.

In very definite terms I informed him that he would be shot if he did not tell me plainly and that I was determined to see that he carried through with his story whether voluntarily or otherwise.

He drove on then until we came to the house, he stopped his car and went up to the front door of the little shack and knocked. The other cars had taken their positions. A man came to the door and in the dim light we felt that we could see Nash.

War Eagle gave the signal. Those of us who had been selected to cover the front of the house ran to our posts; the rest of us ran to the rear of the shack.

We closed in, seized the man and searched the place quickly. The man we had seized was not Nash, although he was not unlike him in stature and physiognomy; his nose was hooked and his head was bald.

I took War Eagle aside after the search was over and found that he had devised a new story, to the effect that the man who came to the door had told him that Nash had sent word that War Eagle should meet him at another point in the little town.

We endeavored to determine where this was, but could not. It was just another of War Eagle's wild fabrications.

In order to complete the investigation we exhibited photographs of Nash to the people in the house and in the neighborhood. Various people said they had seen a man who was identical and that he had visited Hominy on several occasions.

By much circuitous inquiry we determined that this man was supposed to be living in Tulsa, Oklahoma, in a house the address of which was known only by a girl who then lived in Hominy.

We rushed to her address and when we promised to pay her bus fare back to Hominy, she consented to accompany us to Tulsa to point out the house.

We went to the police station in Hominy upon our arrival and informed them of our business, and then courteously allowed two officers to accompany us.

False Lead

The house which the girl pointed out to us was an old frame two-story building, with the steps to the upper story built on the outside. It was 2 o'clock in the morning when we knocked on the door.

A man answered, and strange as it may seem, looking over the shoulder of the special agent who had preceded me, I could have sworn he was Frank Nash.

His head was bald and his nose was hooked, but another glimpse served to establish the fact that he was not Nash.

He became vituperative at being aroused at such an hour of the morning, and it was only after talking with him for a while during which the sincerity of our purpose was demonstrated, that he subsided and apologized for his language.

Another false lead had been covered and covered thoroughly. War Eagle had deliberately manufactured a story and his stupidity only served to defraud the government of its time, money and energies.

But Frank Nash was to be caught, and not far from his old haunts. We had received information from time to time that he was taking refuge in Hot Springs, Ark., the city where many big-time crooks, including such sterling citizens as New York's Lucky Luciano, have found restful surroundings in which to "cool off."

Shortly after this I was transferred away from Oklahoma City. Special agents found Nash in Hot Springs, dragged the wig off his head, identified him and put him in a car to take him out of town immediately.

Word began to spread that a man in Hot Springs had been kidnaped, and another strange thing happened. On the way to Kansas City, the Special Agents, with the captive, were forced to change their route several times in order to avoid possible difficulty with persons who might be interested in delivering Nash.

Nash was no ordinary criminal; long a fugitive, he was one of the cleverest and most desperate men on the roll-call of public enemies. At Kansas City, three law officers ushered him to the car platform, and there in the train-shed a guard of four others was waiting to meet them.

Handcuffed and grimly acquiescent, he was piloted along the vaulted corridor to the street. And then the impossible happened.

Stick 'Em Up!

Nash was placed in a waiting automobile, and his guardians huddled about him. They were all armed. Nash blinked in the morning sunshine and looked indifferently at the busy traffic station on the Union Station plaza.

Suddenly, and with incredulity, the law officers heard a voice shout, "Stick 'em up!"

Only Frank Hermansen had time to shoot.

There, in the heart of the city, bandit machine-guns were trained on the police car.

It was a delivery.

The machine-guns chattered like noisy typewriters, and when they were finished and silent again, an astounding and senseless crime had been committed.

Frank Hermansen and William Grooms, both Kansas City detectives; Otto Reed, chief of police at McAlester, Oklahoma; Raymond J. Caffrey, a special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; and Frank Nash himself, were instantly killed.

R. E. Vetterli, special agent in charge of the Kansas City office, and Special Agent F. J. Lackey, were wounded.

Only Frank Smith, another special agent, came through the slaughter unscathed. Smith had taken the place in the rear seat where the bandits assumed that Frank Nash would be sitting.

Verne Miller directed the Kansas City delivery. He was a vicious killer.

With him were two journeymen gunners who botched the job—Pretty-Boy Floyd and his inseparable pal, Adam Richetti.

Their uneasy trigger-fingers had mowed down the officers, and released Frank Nash only to his heavenly reward.

But their errors were even more fateful.

POPE DEPLORES WAR HORROR IN SPAIN

Vatican City, Oct. 22 (INS)—Pope Pius today described the Spanish civil war as "a tragedy unequaled in history."

The Pontiff so described the conflict in addressing a group of engineers who constructed the Vatican radio station.

The world's present economic distress, said the Pope, is due to the "moral decline of man."

Spain Rebels Advance:

Key Town Taken By White Troops

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

Copyright, 1936, by International News Service

Navalcarnero, Spain, Oct. 22—In one of the major engagements of the Spanish civil war, the White army shelled, machine-gunned and hand-grenaded its way into the important town of Navalcarnero and today stood just 12 miles from Getafe, principal airport of Madrid, and only 18 miles from the heart of the capital.

With loyalists singing their old peasant song over our heads, we watched the capture of the town.

We came up from Valmojado, headquarters of General Varela, along a road lined with dead. Some of them were being burned in shallow graves.

Just outside of Navalcarnero, our automobile following that of Col. Juan Yague, was halted as a burst of rifle and machine-gun fire caused the whole column of troops to seek cover.

We all took shelter in a cut in the road and for two hours listened to a rain of whistling missiles slash the grass just above us and plunk dully into the earth on the other side of the road.

Navalcarnero is the last important town before Madrid and was fortified with everything the Reds had. The Reds had at least three times as many troops as the Whites and they knew this was their last chance to check the advance of General Franco's men.

Nevertheless, the Legion and Moors drove through.

Crouching beneath the crest of a cut in the road, I watched wave after wave of the Foreign Legion and Moors flow insistently, fatally, inevitably, forward through the blasting fire of the Reds.

In the thin line of a single rank, 50 or 60 Moors ran 20 yards then fell low themselves down. Then the Moors got up and ran forward, and the Reds reiterated another 20 yards.

Din of Rifles

Meanwhile, a terrific din of rifle and machine gun fire filled the air, and the persistent whines of bullets told us some reds were watching our hill crest.

Three while pursuit planes cruised high overhead, watching for red bombers—which never came.

For more than two hours we watched the dramatic attack of the Moors and Legion, until by swift stages they disappeared over a ridge of hills.

Rebels Only 13 Miles From Madrid in Sweep

Madrid, Oct. 22 (INS)—Leaving behind captured Navalcarnero and its scenes of horrible carnage, the gold lines of Moorish troops and Foreign Legionnaires marched five miles farther on today—to within 13 miles of Madrid—before the retreating loyalists could re-form their lines and stem the advance.

Far more than 1000 bodies of Leftist defenders were found on the Navalcarnero battlefield, according to rebel statements, when the victors moved into the strategic town. The streets were literally strewn with the dead, the majority killed by a heavy aerial bombardment in which seven government planes were brought down before the infantry marched in.

The thrust beyond Navalcarnero, carrying the rebels altogether 13½ miles nearer Madrid, was part of a perfectly unified advance all around the Madrid circle, which served to keep the lines concentric. Similar fierce rebel attacks advanced the rebel positions beyond Illescas in the southwest, and in the Aranjuez sector south of Madrid and the Escorial in the northwest.

HITLER, DUCE AIDS CONFER

Berlin, Oct. 22 (AP)—The foreign ministers of Germany and Italy spent 45 minutes together at the foreign office today.

Neither Count Galeazzo Ciano, Il Duce's son-in-law, nor Baron Konstantin Von Neurath would make a statement after the conference, which only they attened.

It was indicated no technical negotiations were undertaken.

Count Ciano had luncheon later with Airminister General Herman Wilhelm Goering and inspected the new air ministry.

and Fascism hurtled today towards an early climax, with Britain struggling frantically to prevent the outbreak of an open conflagration.

Fascist successes in Spain, and German-Italian union against the Soviets, are combing to force Moscow into the attitude that "it's now or never for world communism.

With Soviet withdrawal a foregone conclusion, the British Government today summoned the Spanish non-intervention committee to meet tomorrow.

PLOTS NEW WAR

Immediate attention will be given the reply made by Germany to Russia's charge of neutrality violation as well as the new allegations levelled by the Reich against Moscow.

Britain fears the Soviets may endeavor to precipitate a general conflict in the hope that communism will emerge from the chaos of another world war.

But for the moment the battlefield remains in Spain, where Russia, according to information here, is sending vast quantities of rifles and machine guns labelled "food."

Barcelona is the destination of the arms, for Moscow plans to back a Socialist Soviet Republic in Catalonia, which will serve as the future base for a war to regain all Spain for the leftists, authoritative quarters said.

Pressure from the Labor Party for prompt action as well as the growing threat of a general conflagration, prompted Britain to summon the committee without waiting for replies of Italy and Portugal to the Russian charges.

SOVIET TO TAKE WALK

It was felt the German answer supplied a satisfactory basis for immediate convocation of the committee.

That the Soviet Union will walk out of the Spanish non-intervention agreement, then openly aid Barcelona, was informally made known by the Soviet embassy in Paris, and conveyed to London through the French foreign office.

Ambassador Maisky has received instructions from Moscow ordering him, "when the Spanish non-intervention committee meets, to read a protest against continuing violations" of the agreement by Germany, Italy, and Portugal, then to bolt the conference.

Germany has already replied to earlier Soviet charges, bringing detailed counter-accusations against Moscow, and Italy's counter-charges are expected today. Portugal may not reply at all, so it is possible that the non-intervention committee will meet tomorrow or Monday in London.

GERMANY'S CHARGES

Germany's note accuses Soviet Russia of shipping arms to the Spanish government disguised as food, an informed source said.

The German note, transmitted to London prior to tomorrow's meeting, is said to contain seven points. They are in two categories:

TRIPLE-EDGED CRISIS

Factors combining to force a crisis include:

1—Imminence of an Italo-German accord to "outlaw" Russia from the European family of nations.

2—Prospective establishment of a Fascist regime in Spain, with Italo-German recognition.

3—An all-European labor meeting in Paris has been called to demand immediate lifting of the Spanish arms embargo.

Paving the way for recognition of a Catalonian Soviet, Moscow has sent Antonov Ovseyenkow, former ambassador to Warsaw and commander of the troops in Petrograd during the revolution of 1917, to Barcelona as consul-general. He and his staff of 30 will guide the new red regime militarily in the campaign against the future Fascist Spain.

Radicals Burn, Hang Priests in Spain

Vatican City, Oct. 22 (US)—Numerous members of the Catholic clergy in Spain have been burned at the stake, quartered, hung and tortured to death at the hands of Communist mobs, private reports to Osservatore Romano, official Vatican organ, indicated today.

In one instance, 20 priests were killed by Anarchists at Villa France Del Panades because they refused to curse their religion.

At Ciol, the Rev. Farre, a music teacher, was stripped and burned alive on a pyre of his clothes.

Rev. Miral Feix, brother of the mother superior of the Dominican order, dropped dead under questioning.

A parish priest was shot dead at Olite by a gang of Communists who stood him up against a wall and warned him they would fire as soon as their cigars went out.

At Gerona, an unknown number of priests were dragged through the streets and clubbed to death.

The Rev. Tapies was shot to death by Communists at Piedra de Segur although the whole population pleaded for his life.

In addition, the bishops of Siguenza, Tarragona, Lerida and Barbastro were slain by Anarchists.

10,000 Hostages in Peril; Warships Aid 250

London, Oct. 22 (AP)—The British government was informed today that there was 10,000 persons held as hostages and prisoners in Madrid, including 1500 women.

Thousands are without means of support, the government learned.

Britain had received no replies from either Madrid or the insurgents to its plea that captives held by both camps be exchanged via British warships.

However, it was stated the warships Exmouth and Esk already had evacuated and exchanged more than 250 hostages between the Burgos insurgent headquarters and the Basque (government) administration of Bilbao, in cooperation with the Red Cross.

WOMEN IN LOVE

By Mae Christie

CHAPTER 8

Now to get rid of her white elephant—otherwise one thousand dollars' worth of merchandise that wouldn't "move"—certainly appealed to the Gift Shop buyer.

She disliked Ann Delafield, but she would use her to the limit, by not!

Ann's institute for the Ice Carnival was bright scarlet, lined with white fox fur.

Extravagant white boots with white fur tops to them went with the smart little suit and cap that were so eminently becoming to Ann.

Ann greeted Alexandra Sherwood with enthusiasm.

"She was looking forward immensely to the Carnival, for she adored skating, and to know that she had combined an excellent stroke of business (via the masks and dominoes) was doubly gratifying.

Gordon Gavin was emerging from his shell and coming to the carnival, and all her own crowd would be there too. People from the other sets, particularly among the buyers Ann thought. "If only Mr. Hastie would come!" But there was no sign of it, for he seemed to have no interest whatever in society functions.

When the big night came, and the Garden ice rink was crowded, and the band played all the latest dance numbers, Ann was on air. Marked as she was, she had innumerable partners, but there was one—a tall man who was a perfect skater —who contrived after a time, to annex her.

He was curiously silent, considering that champagne cocktails at a dollar apiece had been flowing like the Hudson river from the start. Many of Ann's partners had been inspired to fine skates, due to fruitless, or overdating in performance, so that it was relatively easy to keep the pair for two periods at last.

Then the man who had started so quietly timed

"A quick-change of manner" thought Ann, losing herself now to the exhilarating rhythm.

But over and above all this perfection of movement there was something magnetic about her tall companion so that she refused to let anyone else cut in.

"We shall not now. You deserve a glass of champagne. A present for a good skater," he said. He led her to the edge of the rink and steered her over to a little alcove. Freddy and Beatrice had arranged plenty of selected alfresco dinners. This one was made-to-order, and Ann thanked Christmas, fire.

Presently her escort came with a bottle of champagne and two glasses. "There, you are, is it Miss Sherwood?"

Then drank. How handsome! They talked. How did you guess my name? Ann enquired.

"Your coiffeur, dear. Your lieutenant. Your quartermaster. My own invention," said the unknown.

There was something reminiscent in that low-pitched beautifully modulated voice that made her blood race faster, and set her heart beat thrillingly.

And flirted, sipping herself greatly.

And so did he.

Suddenly he stopped and kissed her. With a quick movement she pushed his mask back from his face.

The next moment

Ann went on and on.

To make herself easier to play Bradley made love to her. Bored to distraction by the masked Carnival would be a dramatic gesture, flourishing her draught with foreground interest.

Wasn't it no definite policy never to mix social relations with business?

How much more would it annoy him—say, antagonize him—to realize that he had kissed one of the employees of his own store?

Instead of putting on her shoes with her accustomed quiet nonchalantly, she would demote her to the lowest floor that she had ever risen, promptly and firmly, from the fourteenth floor. And then, Ann thought, with a sudden flash of inspiration, that Brenda, into the bargain, would be glad to see her against the wall.

Goodbye, Cosmopolitan Shoppes!

Adieu, extravagance!

Those thoughts flashed through her mind as, from behind the safety of her mask, she looked into the handsome dark eyes of her partner.

But Ann would not have been human had she not thrilled to the sheer drama of the situation.

She felt tinglingly alive. And not from the champagne alone.

"If I could only make him fall in love with me!" her heart clamored.

"Careful, Ann! Careful!" her brain cautioned.

But this chance might never come again. Couldn't daring and artistic measures be combined?

With a swift movement and a gay laugh she pulled his mask back where it belonged, over the upper part of his face, telling him that curiosity killed the cat, and she was sorry for her boldness—and his.

"But I'm dying of curiosity!" he protested, making to pull the mask back again.

In the nick of time she drew back. Laughing, she pulled his hands away.

"So you admit the awful fact that men and cats are like each other? Hooray!"

"How so?"

"Because a man and a cat will both fly away from you if you attempt to hold them too tightly. They don't want mauling. But invite a cat or a man—and he'll come around fairly pestering you for attention. Begging for petting!" reminded Ann positively.

Paul Bradley gave a hearty laugh. He was amused.

"Can't you see I'm sitting up on my hind legs at this minute?"

"No. That's a dog's prerogative. A dog's always grateful for a kind word or a bone. A dog's like a woman. Women snap up compliments, oh! so gratefully, begging for more, but men are frightfully suspicious of compliments, suspecting the ulterior motive."

"Where did you learn this marvelous psychology, at your tender age?"

"At the University of Hard Knocks," she rejoined pertly.

"I don't believe it."

"Now what on earth do you know about me?" derisively retorted Ann.

"That you're charming, and witty, and I'm sure awfully pretty if only you'd take off that absurd mask you're wearing."

"Ha! Thanks, kind sir! Am I supposed to gratefully snap up that bone?"

"Now why on earth must you compare yourself to a dog?"

"For the aforementioned reasons, and also that you and I may have the pleasure of foraging together! I see so plainly in you the arrogant self-assurance of Pug-On-the-Hearth!"

"Not on the hearth. Just off the ice, and dying for warmth."

"In New York City, with its surplus females, there must be loads of little fires where you can warm yourself at. Also added provocatively. "Provided you're not settled for life at one little family hearth!"

Her heart beat fast, awaiting his reply. Suppose he were married—or as good as married?

"No. I'm all alone."

"Lonesome! Ho! That old gag!" "Don't you know—" he caught her wrist—"that cats hate having cold water thrown on them?"

"And love to wander out at night in search of adventure!" she compromised, laughing.

"They hate to be rubbed the wrong way, as you're deliberately doing, you bad girl!"

"But I adore cats."

"I'm glad. D'you hear me purring?"

"There goes your feline family again!"

"The rain because I've found the most piquant little partner in the Carnival. Let's drink to her!"

He suggested filling Ann's glass and his own, and tilting his up. They drank their champagne.

Rhapsody in Blue

DID YOU EVER see dew strung on grass in exquisitely tiny globules of iridescence? Then you'll know exactly how the fine metallic threads look that run through the crepe used in this delectable cocktail-time frock. Its color is a softened version of the Nattier blue, the very same luscious blue Nattier painted in every portrait of the lovely Dubarry. So you see there are overwhelming odds in favor of glamour for the girl who wears it! Silver flowers with star-sapphire blue centers, at neck and belt, heighten the blueness of the whole. And then there is the utterly bewitching blue velour turban that repeats the flower-center shade.

MARRIED COMRADES

By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 131

I KNEW my husband well enough to be certain he would keep his threat not to start for Patchogue until I was safely asleep.

I knew also that Katherine and I could not carry out her plan to start for the mountains at daylight.

I saw my course clearly. If I found it impossible to work Jim successfully, I must feign it. Dicky must not be delayed. But on one point I must be assured. I sounded it clearly in the otherwise meek capitulation which I promptly gave to his ultimatum

WANTS PROMISE, TOO

"Now that you've assured me about Jim watching over the boys, I know I shall be able to get to sleep at once," I said, "for I am very tired. But you must promise me something, too"

"Name it," he said promptly, smiling down at me.

"That you won't go alone to Patchogue," I said quickly.

"Tuck your mind away to rest with your body," he retorted. "That matter is already settled. I'm giving a lift to one of the state troopers who's going off duty at midnight and for some reason of his own, wants to get down to Patchogue as soon as he can. Miller will come back with me. Any more questions?"

There was a hint of impatience in his voice, which I could not resent, for I felt that I had been irritatingly captious. With every bit of will power left me by the nerve-racking day, I pumped cheery nonchalance into my voice and manner.

KATHERINE BRINGS TRAY

"Nary a question," I told him. "Tell Katie to bring me that hot milk as soon as it's ready. I'll be undressed and in bed by the time she gets here, and I know I shall be able to get to sleep immediately afterward."

He gave me a keen glance from beneath slightly narrowed eyebrows.

"I'm sure you will," he said with odd emphasis as he stooped and kissed me. "Good night."

I understood the meaning of that emphasis when a few minutes later, Katherine came into my bedroom attired in bathrobe and slippers, carrying a small tray holding a pitcher of hot milk, a plate of crisp crackers, a glass of water, an empty glass and a serviette.

"Where's Katie?" I asked, although I knew very well the reason for her substitution for Katie.

"I suppose she's in her room," Katherine replied promptly. "I happened to be in the hall when Dicky came out, and as I promptly volunteered for this service of love."

Her voice was gay, but her eyes were wary, and I knew that she was gauging my mood. Suddenly I laughed outright, meaningly, and her eyes relaxed their tension and smiled back at me.

"You're too transparent," I said gaily. "Bring out your sleeping potion, and I'll take it, if not with gusto, at least with a spionk. But don't expect me to believe any yarn about being in the hall accidentally. You needn't give Dicky away, but I know very well he must have routed you out and impressed you into service because he thought I needed to be put to sleep."

"And so you do," she retorted, deftly dodging my comment upon Dicky. "So swallow this and take a sip of water, and then you may have your hot milk."

I obediently did as she bid me and was glad indeed of my husband's ruse when I drifted off into slumber, too drowsy to worry over Dicky's possible forgetting to waken me on schedule.

Neither Dicky nor I, however—nor, indeed, any other grown-up—need have worried about the rising hour. Long before daylight, I heard the shrilling of an alarm clock somewhere in the house. A few minutes later there came in my ears the voices of Junior and Roderick in amiable but spirited altercation with Jim.

"She does, too, want us to wake her up," Junior finished the argument with decision. "She said we had to start by daylight and I don't care if it is an hour and a half before then. Women are awful slow, and she'll need all the time there is."

"All right, all right," Jim said resignedly. "Go on! But if she kicks, I'm not going to take the blame."

"You won't have to," Junior assured him blithely. "We'll take the responsibility for everything."

And as I lay divided between smiling indulgence and irritation at being awakened before time, there came a rush of boyish feet across the hall and a subdued but insistent knocking upon my door.

Steering the Bidding

When one hand of a partnership holds a so-called rock-crusher and the other few, if any, high cards, a determined effort should be made to maneuver the bidding in such a way that the strong hand will not become the exposed dummy.

This, of course, is a generality; it must be admitted that bidding exigencies will not always allow this. There are two reasons why the rock-crusher should not be exposed.

One of them concerns the opening lead—it is far better to have the lead come up to strength than through it; but the more important reason is that defenders naturally put up better defense when they can actually see the exposed high honors than when they must visualize them.

East, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ Q J 9 3 ♡ 9 6 4 2 ◇ 7 2 ♣ 9 6 5
♠ 7 6 5 ♡ 8 5 ◇ K J 8 5 4 ♣ K J 7	West East North South	♠ K 4 2 ♡ Q J 10 ◇ 10 9 6 ♣ 10 8 4 2
	♠ A 10 8 ♡ A K 7 3 ◇ A Q 9 ♣ A Q 3

This hand was recently played in a team-of-four match. At one table, South opened the bidding with two notrump and North raised to three.

West opened the fourth best diamond (unwisely, I think, considering that he should have feared a major tenace on his right), and nine tricks became very easy for the declarer, since dummy's fourth heart became an entry for the taking of the spade finesse.

At the other table, the bidding went:

South	West	North	East
2♡	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's opening bid was very bad for two distinct reasons. First, he did not have a two heart bid, inasmuch as he had more losers than the bridge rules allowed, his two heart bid was extremely apt to place a probable notrump contract into the wrong hand, as it actually did.

It is perfectly true that North could have made three notrump against the opening lead of the club deuce by guessing correctly the position of the adverse key cards, but the point of the matter was that North had a much harder problem to face, and did not solve it correctly.

He played the Queen of clubs on the first lead, and after that he never had a chance. West won with the King and returned the club. Now, even though North's nine of hearts turned into an entry for the successful finessing of spades, East naturally did not cover the Queen or Jack, and North therefore was held to three spade tricks, three hearts and the two minor Aces.

Rules for MAKING Apple JELLY

By MARTHA LEE

LONG shelves loaded with jellies and preserves had their place beside the potato bins and apple barrels in the old-fashioned cellar. Cellars aren't as important now as they used to be but fruit jellies are just as tempting as ever.

The summer fruits—strawberries, raspberries and black berries—are already in the jelly glasses and now is the time for apple jellies.

APPLE JELLY

Apple jelly may be made from parings and cuttings of tart apples used in other canning. Discard all faulty parts. Cover well with water and cook until fruit is quite done. Strain twice. Add ¾ cup sugar to 1 cup of boiling juice. When it reaches the jelly stage skim and pour at once into hot jelly glasses.

TEST FOR JELLY

The most satisfactory jelly test is made by (1) dipping a metal spoon with clean, smooth edges into the boiling syrup, (2) lifting the spoon about 1 foot above the kettle and allowing the contents to drop back into the syrup. The behavior of the last drops in the spoon will indicate the concentration of the syrup. At first, these will leave the spoon simultaneously. When the last few drops fall side by side or form a sheet which falls leaving the spoon clean, the jellying point has been reached.

APPLE SAUCE JELLY

3 dozen apples
2 ounces stick cinnamon
Juice of 2 lemons
Sugar

Wash apples, cut in quarters. Put in kettle, add cold water to come nearly to top of apples. Cook slowly until apples are soft. Drain in a sterilized bag. Add lemon juice to extracted juice and cinnamon. Boil in cheesecloth. Boil 20 minutes and remove spice. Measure, add equal quantity of sugar and boil until syrup falls in heavy drops from spoon. Pour into hot jelly glasses.

PARADISE JELLY

1-3 cup apple juice
1-3 cup quince juice
1-3 cup cranberry juice
3-4 cup sugar

The above proportion of 1 cup fruit juice to 3-4 cup sugar may be increased up to two quarts of juice in one batch. Measure fruit juices, bring to vigorous boil, skim the juice and add sugar and stir until dissolved. Cook rapidly for 10 to 15 minutes or until test shows jelly is done. It is unnecessary to skim again. The predominating flavor of this jelly is cranberry.

LEWIS HANEY ON POLITICS

London Paper Finds

DEAL IDEAS HAVE MADE

Little Difference

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Oct. 22—A large part of the English press has been inclined to speak well of Roosevelt and his New Deal. Some prominent Englishmen naturally favor New Deal policies, because Roosevelt borrowed their ideas.

Others have made money by speculating in silver and American stocks which New Deal policies have benefited.

There has been a general tendency to handle the New Deal gently, through fear it might gain permanent control of America at a time when England could hardly afford to offend a possible ally.

These facts lend added interest to the critical examination of New Deal achievements recently published in the London "Economist." We can be sure that it leans backward in expressing adverse opinion.

I would say that the outstanding feature of the discussion is its finding that most of the leading New Deal policies have made little net difference. They have either been futile or brought offsetting evils and dangers.

For instance, it is recognized that politics had to be played in order to make the New Deal organization effective.

But the English authority concludes that it is "open to doubt" whether this exercise—the extent to which the 'spoils system' has been applied to the new agencies of government," or (2) "the excessive partisanship of the administration's acts."

In discussing "public works" the conclusion is reached that the size of the program has been exaggerated and they have played but a small part.

As to "housing," the verdict is that the problem of the slums still remains, and that the building industry is still depressed.

Taking up the National Recovery Administration, "The Economist" concludes that it was more of a muddle than a policy; it did little harm, because it was ineffective.

Then comes "banking reforms." The judgment is that these have been disappointingly negative, with few positive encouragements to sound banking. Inflation is being encouraged, while it is hard to see how the concentration of control at Washington can be really effective in restricting credit.

Even as to the "easy money" policy (a thing dear to many British hearts), the finding is that Roosevelt carried the experiment "to unprecedented lengths," and that it has become financial dynamite for the future.

Probably the Securities and Exchange Commission is the most successful New Deal measure. The Economist says of it that it is difficult to say whether the protection given to the investing public is commensurate with the restrictions forced upon the security markets. It adds that the prohibitions have outrun the possibilities of enforcement. Every American should read the following:

"If the criterion be Utopian, the achievements of the New Deal appear to be small. Relief there has been, but little more than enough to keep the population fed, clothed and armed.

"Recovery there has been, but only to a point well below the pre-depression level.

"Reform there has also been, but it is slight in comparison with the reformers' blueprints.

"The great problems of the country (agricultural and business cycles) are still hardly touched.

"The monetary structure of the country, on balance, is less under control than formerly."

MORE Firmness EVIDENT IN STAPLE PRICES

With some staples at a new high for the current movement and declines held to narrow margins, firmness spread to more of the major commodity markets this week.

Buying was markedly active in some groups, as shortages appeared and further price advances became imminent.

The steadiness of the general price average was revealed by the Dun & Bradstreet Daily Commodity Index, which closed at 120.53, as against 131.04 for the week previous. It was higher, however, by 5.6 per cent than the comparative 1935 position at 125.57.

Grain quotations were marked down, with the largest loss in corn, which dropped 5c a bushel, as the new crop came into sight. The decline in wheat was held to 1½c, due to the strong undertone, in sympathy with the Liverpool market. Under the active buying of domestic and foreign manufacturers, cocoa advanced to a new peak for the season at 9.19c a pound, the highest point reached since 1930. Increasing scarcity of offerings and the smaller crop indicated for the Gold Coast furnished most of the impetus to the rise. The Bahia crop has been practically sold.

Although refiners bought raws more freely, sugar was off 10c for the week. Continuing the rise of the two weeks preceding, Rio coffee advanced 4c a pound and Santos 5c, buying being encouraged by belief that a coffee cartel will revive prices upward, following the recent conference in Bogota, Columbia. Rubber, flour and rice were lower, but quotations on eggs and long island potatoes were firmer. Cattle, beef cows and veal declined, but meat pork was unchanged. Hams continued firm, lard was off 20c and bacon dropped 4c a pound.

Copper held its prominence, as the foreign price reached 10c a pound, strengthening the domestic position at 9½c, the same as for the week preceding. Silver, lead and zinc remained firm at their previous levels, but tin eased off 3c to 43.50c a lb., the lowest in several weeks. Trading in the latter metal is expected to be slow until after the meeting of the international tin committee at The Hague on October 21. At Penang, September exports of crude rubber was up 24.9 per cent from 1935 and there was a further reduction in stocks, buying was light for the week and the quotation on standard sheets was steady.

Hide markets were devoid of new developments, the steady movement keeping prices steady, with the exception of Chicago packers' No. 1, which were down 1c. The long-term outlook for hide values improved. Previous price increases in the leather market were maintained, and the call was more active due to the heavy repeat orders received by shoe manufacturers.

NEW Sales RECORDS

RECOVERY IN HARDWARE

New York, Oct. 22—The recovery in hardware sales set new records, since 1929, for some manufacturers and wholesalers last month, and October shipments are equaling or exceeding the September rate.

The cooler weather is stimulating retail buying. All lines not actually out of season are doing well, and on some the gain has been phenomenal, Hardware Age says.

Both the early and current demand for stoves, and for house and kitchen furnishings, is running ahead of expectations. Bicycles are still selling many weeks ahead of their capacity. Toys, gift items and sleds are moving out faster than last year.

Many manufacturers, in varied lines, are too busy to ship promptly, and shortages continue to annoy all distributors. Factories making consumer goods are operating at capacity, with output in some cases the highest on record.

The speed of the improvement naturally inspires some question whether the present rate of demand can continue. However, sales reports from all quarters indicate that the goods made have been selling, and that stocks are not piling up. The new commitments of merchants for spring delivery show that they expect no recession.

The buying power is coming from increased employment, larger farm income, and greater dividend payments, as well as from government contributions. There is no great fear that the income from any of these sources will fall off materially.

Prices on hardware lines have been firmed by recent advances in flat glass materials, particularly steel, and it is difficult to find staple lines where fourth quarter costs are not well above the "lows" of the year. Most advances being announced are reasonably justified by higher costs.

Engineering Awards Off

New York, Oct. 22 (AP)—Engineering construction awards for the week ended Tuesday were $43,126,000, compared with $58,980,000 in the corresponding 1935 period, the "Engineering News-Record" reported today.

Of the total, private work accounted for $10,866,000, against $18,095,000 in the like 1935 week, the report showed. Public construction totaled $32,260,000, of which federal amounted to $3,675,000 and state and municipal $28,579,000.

Total compared with public work of $40,885,000 in the like 1935 period, of which $127,738,000 was federal and $28,147,000 was state and municipal.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, Oct. 22—At least one commodity market is being dominated by the coming elections; that for sugar. Fenner & Beane write that the market's susceptibility to the trend of the political campaign is "very much in evidence as its entire price structure is dependent on the election outcome."

The letter went on to say: "The general impression prevails that the future market is reflecting the swing of election odds more in favor of re-election of the present administration, a continuance of which is believed to assure control of sugar through the quota system as well as the maintenance of the special trade treaty with Cuba." The reverse situation, the message said, would bring "ruin" to the present price structure.

Big Dividend Action Near

Action on the next General Motors common and U. S. Steel preferred dividends will be taken within the next week or ten days. The Steel payment is announced simultaneously with the publication of earnings, the fourth Tuesday following the end of a quarterly period. General Motors handles both events on different days. Reports support no action by the board, a record price for the stock seem to foreshadow an increase in the Steel preferred dividend over the 50 cent quarterly rate paid the last three years. On the case of General Motors common the high forecasts point to another 75 cents extra, the same as three years ago. This would make a total of $4.50 a share regular and extra dividends declared on the stock this year.

October Rail Net Forecast

Gross revenues of the nation's railroads for the current month are expected to total $377,000,000, a figure which would compare with $360,000,000 in September and $341,-000,000 in October, 1935, according to an estimate by Poor's. If this estimate is realized, railroad net income after taxes and charges should be in the vicinity of $34,000,000, bringing the total net income for the first ten months to about $340,000,000. Poor's adds. For the first ten 1935 months, the rails had net income of $30,490,000.

SEC Reports Almost Year After Event

A leading justification for the creation of the Securities and Exchange Commission was the idea of greater and prompt publicity about those significant changes in the affairs of corporations whose securities are publicly and generally owned. One requirement from officers, directors and the owners of 10 per cent or more of the stock issues of companies which are registered with the commission is that they report within the first ten days of a month all transactions in the securities of such companies which occurred during the preceding month. These reports are published subsequently by the commission, the latest one being made public today. People who champion this idea of complete and prompt publicity have noticed recently an increasing number of reports released by the commission which are labeled "amended" or "held for correction." The latter description is applied in the case of the International Nickel Company of Canada for November last year. On the twenty-ninth of that month, Thomas Morrison, a director, made a gift of 50,000 shares of the common stock. The decrease in his holdings of the issue in that month totaled 52,500 shares, leaving him with 32,200 shares. Thus the rank and file of stockholders have an opportunity to learn of such a transaction almost a year after the event, and it is fair to assume that somewhere along the line there has been some avoidable tardiness. What the reason for the delay is we do not know, do you?

Nash, Kelvinator Merger Looms

Chicago, Oct. 22 (INS)—C. W. Nash, chairman of the board of Nash Motors Company, declared today that he and George W. Mason, president of Kelvinator Corporation, had discussed possibility of the merger of the two companies but that no plans had been laid formally to directors of the Nash Company, it was learned.

Nothing definite has been agreed upon, Nash said, but several proposals have been offered.

He said it was obvious that no deal could be made or announced without approval of the directors and stockholders and that no date for a formal meeting of the board had been set.

Nash refused to go into details of the conversations but said that if the deal does not go through Mason would not be likely to succeed K. T. McCarty as president of Nash Motors. McCarty's resignation will take effect before December 30.

If the merger develops it was not known whether the company will continue its activities in Kenosha, Wis., or not.

SALES GAIN

697 Stores Located In U.S.

S. S. Kresge Company is the second largest variety chain store system in the United States and Canada, being topped only by F. W. Woolworth Company.

At present there are 697 Kresge stores located throughout the United States and 48 in Canada. These stores handle all types of merchandise ranging in price from 5 cents to $1.

Sales last year totaled $137,900,000. This represented an increase of 11.3 per cent from the low point of 1932 and were about 12 per cent under the peak year of 1929.

The company had a fairly high inventory turnover during the first three years of the depression. In anticipation of higher prices the inventory was built up in 1933 and at present is about the same as in 1929.

The average profit per store in 1935 was $13,711, as compared with $7867 in 1932 and $39,914 in 1928.

Kresge's margin of profit on sales dwindled from 10.62 per cent in 1928 to 4.55 per cent in 1932 and recovered to 7.41 per cent in 1935.

The company also filed a registration statement under the Securities Act covering the new issue.

Proceeds from sale of the bonds would be used to redeem $10,067,000 5 per cent first mortgage bonds, due 1954.

Net income of the New England Power Co. for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1936, was $1,671,000.

For the 12 months ended Dec. 31, 1935, there was a net income of $2,214,167 after all charges and taxes, against net income of $1,-800,822 in the previous year.

SLOAN On Cyclical SAVINGS

DEPRESSION LESSONS

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

Copyright, 1936, Universal Service

New York, Oct. 22—Human nature is a relatively constant factor which contributes toward making broad upward and downward movements in economic activity resemble one another.

With the rebirth of confidence, there are those who are already saying that men have learned nothing from the depression experience.

Extreme generalization is treacherous, as undoubtedly at least an intelligent minority has been impressed by practical experience. The thinking here will doubtless be disposed throughout their lifetime to have mental reservations when in the spirit of ballyhoo promoters allege that the country is in an entirely new era.

Apart from this, this is an interlude between partial and full recovery, when for a time, even the fools have to be right.

Laurence H. Sloan of the Standard Statistics Company, has just written a new book which is devoted to the proposition that the business cycle has not been subjugated as a result of New Deal reforms.

In expressing skepticism of the feasibility of lasting stability in business cycles as a result of governmental fiat, Mr. Sloan, in stating his conclusion in his new tome entitled

"Two Cycles of Corporation Profits, 1922-1933; 1933-19—," declares, "Now in all fairness, it should be pointed out that these assumptions will not find unanimous support among other business economists or security market economists. They will find ardent supporters who stand at the same time a representative and by no means uniformed opposite number of a declaration of equal and opposite number.

"It should further be pointed out that one of the underlying purposes of many influential men now holding office in the national administration is to have laws placed on our statute books by which future business and stock market booms can be prevented. By preventing booms, they hope thereafter to prevent crises and depressions.

"Both the laws now providing the powers of control lodged with the Federal Reserve Board and the Securities and Exchange Commission were formulated upon this principle. NRA was a piece of business of the same stripe. And there are those who confess ardently to seek still further federal legislation which will enable even broader scale efforts at, and experimentation with, what they refer to as 'stabilization,' and what many businessmen here refer to as unwarranted and dangerous meddling."

In giving his viewpoint, Mr. Sloan says:

"Despite all that may be said on the other side, and despite all the talk about control and stabilization which have been enacted, the major premise of cyclical movements in business and the security markets has been adopted for this study for one reason and for only one reason: because it is believed to be a safe premise. It is being employed because it is believed to be the most useful hypothesis from which the security owner may project his plans, shape his course of action and arrive at his ultimate decisions."

Of course, there are infinite degrees of shadings within the two opposing conceptions which Mr. Sloan has outlined.

Though it may be unreasonable to expect to eliminate fluctuations from the course of business, moderation in the large, through better understanding can doubtless make progress toward mitigating the intensity of the swings.

Under the new technology of the present age, the great problem of industrial balance. A perfect equilibrium may be an attainable ideal, but this conclusion does not necessarily mean that all of the key problems of management. In the last depression, numerous accustomed mistakes maintained a headquartment of more or less severity, but if the disparity between farm and industry had not become so acute the extent of the decline could have been greatly reduced.

Even though stability in the full sense of the word may be beyond human grasp, there is no excuse for drifting plumby toward instability.

Unquestionably the excesses of a boom measure the degree of the ultimately ensuing depression, but there is much wisdom in the late Paul M. Warburg's dictum that the way to mitigate a depression is to "sit on the bulge" during the preceding period of prosperity.

Edison OF BOSTON Report

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston reports earnings of $5,126,963, equivalent to $8.90 a share.

This compares with an income balance of $5,206,616 for the year ended September 30, 1935, equivalent to $9.73 a share on shares outstanding during 1935 period.

In the current year's statement the company is required to consolidate the accounts of its subsidiary, Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Brockton, with those of the parent company. The Brockton company supplies electric light and power service to Brockton and 10 surrounding communities. Its earnings applicable to Edison Boston stock in the 1935 year were $1,080,353, equivalent to $2.02 a share on the 535,000 shares outstanding during that year. The earnings figures would be reduced to the same basis as Edison Boston stock for the 1936 year. The method of consolidation is required by the Federal Power Commission.

The holding company statement is rather complicated as a result of the consolidation of the Brockton electric lighting company. The Brockton company has outstanding $1,000,000 of 4½ per cent bonds, $1,000,000 of 5 per cent bonds and 20,000 shares of $25 par value preferred stock, on which dividends are paid at the rate of $1.50 a share. These securities have been retired by the parent company. This explains, by introduction of new issue amount not to exceed $2,000,000 of 3½ per cent bonds, bearing interest from Jan. 1, 1936, due Jan. 1, 1966, callable at 105 and interest, and redeemable through the operation of a sinking fund to provide for the retirement of 2½ per cent of the bonds each year, beginning Jan. 1, 1937, at prices ranging from 102½ to par.

The income statement for the 1936 year is not comparable with that for the 1935 year. After the consolidation of the Brockton company, Edison Boston will receive dividends on the Brockton preferred stock, but will not receive interest on the Brockton bonds. Edison Boston has guaranteed the Brockton bonds, and will be required to pay interest on them if Brockton is unable to do so. Edison Boston will receive dividends on the Brockton common stock, but will not receive interest on the Brockton bonds. Edison Boston has guaranteed the Brockton bonds, and will be required to pay interest on them if Brockton is unable to do so.

Nantucket, we hear that Historic Hall Bearing will move to. This company is a very strong financial condition and has a well diversified business. Lehigh Coal & Nav. has improved its position materially in the last year, and it is thought that an increase in the dividend rate may be expected. Prosperity Company may earn between $2 and $3 a share this year. Corporation is expected to earn 75 cents a share this year. The company earned three cents a share the first six months with an average for the last 12 months of 6 per cent of capacity. Currently the company is operating at 60 per cent of the basis of the recapitalization plan, if the company could operate at capacity it is felt it is believed that earnings would be about $3 a share. White Motors have reported that with a small profit margin basis in order to rehabilitate the White name. Much of the production this year was of the light-weight truck type, and sales were made on a small profit basis. Moreover, the company has given a liberal car and truck financing to dealers. Cuba Products should earn in excess of $2 this year.

The position of the railroad equipment shares is somewhat improved. After three months of declining business, orders for freight cars have increased substantially, and the industry has begun to operate at a rate which will result in a profit. Pullman has been operating at a rate which will result in a profit. Pullman has been operating at a rate which will result in a profit. Pullman has been operating at a rate which will result in a profit.

Boardroom Gossip: Big Year Dividends are said to have expanded recently. The company is believed to have earned $3.50 a share. Important accounts with vehicle builders accounting to advance. And it is reported to have added some new business. Particularly in the transmission division, reflecting the unchecked use of overdrive equipment on new cars. ... substantial requisitions of parts are expected between now and the year end. ... Present indications are that Chrysler's third quarter will approximately be a share, as compared with 38 cents in the previous three months and 49 cents a share in the second quarter. The company enters the final quarter, which usually is the best of the year, with volumes of its various divisions at record, or near record levels. If is estimated that profits for the period will be large enough to bring earnings for the full year to about the 1929 level of $4.94 a share and perhaps as high as $5. ... Substantial sales of Chrysler are manifested over a wide front, with the gas division leading the field as a result of the increased usage in the heavy industries.

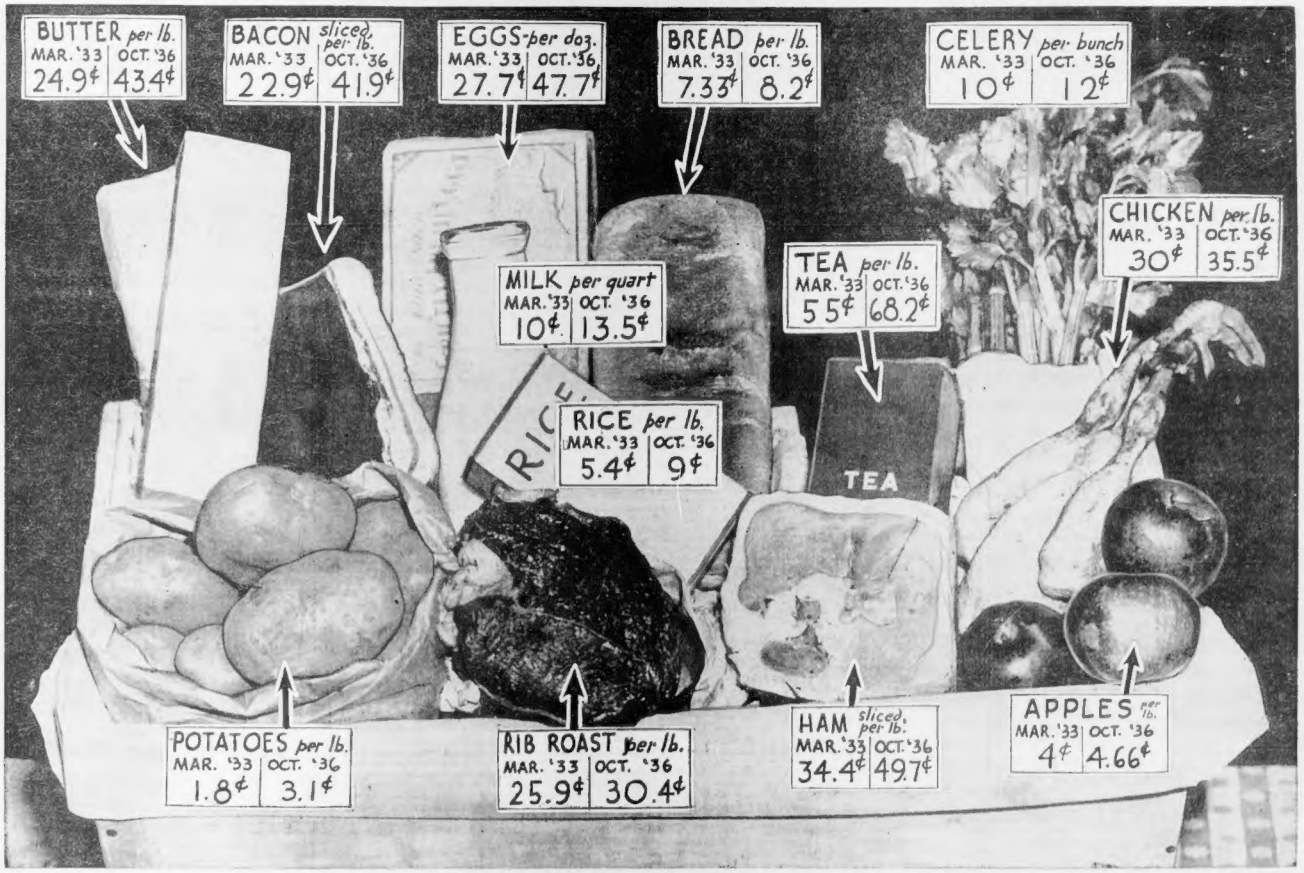
Here's What the Raw Deal Has Done to Your Market Basket



All Prices Used Above Are OFFICIAL Prices from the U. S. Bureau of Markets

Every meal eaten by an American family today has the Raw Deal as its invisible guest.

Give it time enough and it will eat that family "out of house and home," invisible though it may be.

For what a family cannot pay for it surely cannot eat. And already it is paying approximately FORTY PER CENT MORE FOR ITS MEALS.

Look at the price tags on the foods in the picture above. Every one of them has shot up since March, 1933, when the Raw Deal first drew up a chair and sat at your dining table.

They will go higher, too. Already the Department of Agriculture has warned that bacon will go to FIFTY CENTS A POUND this winter.

How much, at that price, will you be able to eat?

How much will you be able to give to your family?

Not that your uninvited guest cares. He won't go hungry.

He has already "eaten" the bacon of six million pigs.

You remember them, don't you?—the six million little pigs that were WANTONLY SLAUGHTERED AND THROWN AWAY by an Administration experimenting with living, breathing, hopeful people.

Keep on remembering them when you are told—as you will be told—that high food prices are the result of the recent drouth.

THOSE PIGS WERE SLAUGHTERED LONG BEFORE THE DROUTH.

What, today, would be the price of pork products had they been allowed to live?

Why has the price of bread gone up—the price of milk—the price of fruit—the price of almost every food for which grateful people thank God before they eat?

Ask that of your invisible guest.

You will receive no answer, no truthful answer.

Because the Raw Deal does not think you are entitled to an answer, for the Raw Deal CAN DO NO WRONG.

There were others who once thought that and now they are of the dust.

Any answer must come from you yourself and it must spring from the full realization that the Raw Deal is ROBBING YOUR MARKET BASKET under the shameful protection of its own dictatorial laws.

There is a law beyond the law—the law of supply and demand—but the Raw Deal has tinkered with even that.

The farms of America could feed you and your families at prices you could afford.

But the farms of America lie barren under the feet of that same Raw Deal.

So that other countries feed you, bartering their small supply against your great demand.

You may not have thought of it in just that way.

But you have certainly thought of it in this way:

That the dollar you spend for food is steadily buying less in quantity and quality. And that, really, is all that you need to know.

That and the fact that an Administration which is bankrupting a country is also bankrupting its homes.

A Worthy Campaign

BOSTON'S Associated Jewish Philanthropies, worthy charitable organization whose institutions touch every phase of communal and home life, seeks $550,000 to carry on its work during 1937.

It is a deserving campaign, vital to the welfare of hundreds of Boston families.

During the depression years, the Jewish Philanthropies assisted thousands, providing scores of services, from maternal care to free burials.

Much remains to be done; the older institutions maintained on their high plane of excellence, the newer supported and improved.

The $550,000 goal must be achieved.

To the Boston Community Federation and numerous other charitable agencies, both Catholic and Protestant, the Jewish people have always been liberal donors.

Justice and gratitude, therefore, require THEIR campaign to be EVERYBODY'S campaign, regardless of creed or denomination. And each should assist as generously as his financial ability permits.

The $550,000 goal, a large sum, necessitating unbounded effort by those that seek contributions, is small in comparison with the greatness of good works performed daily by the Jewish Philanthropies.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Oct. 22.—Never before has New York had so many young married couples literally working out their salvation. That is. Each has a job. The types who join up for lunch, meet on street corners to ride home together, make adventure of budget and take the depression in modern stride.

This new deal in domesticity, inspired, of course, by the times, is an experiment long looked down upon by many of the sophisticated and spoils the ancient axiom. Woman's place is in the home. Yet a recent survey shows that a majority living the new way are content.

In instances it has resulted in unusual degree of thrift and mutual independence not so frequently welcomed under the old order. Most of these, trying the experiment, live in sprightly rear bedroom apartments within easy commuting distance.

A savings bank manager tells me that during the past four years joint accounts between husbands and wives, just wed, have more than tripled. And continue to expand. And some buyers among them have given the against real estate hunting its first big push.

Portent contrast: Tom Geraghty recently stopped at an inn near Stoke Poges, England, home of Thomas Gray who wrote there the gloomy "Elegy." The famous graveyard is hard by. In Geraghty's room hung a framed bit of verse by Strickland Gillilan: "Oh again, Off Again, Gone Again Finnigan."

Alfred Vanderbilt, at 23, emerges from the racing season as leading sportsman as well as about the most popular. Despite immaturity, he has in every exigency shown that quality of fairness that usually comes with seasoning. To stablemen he is "Al." And that's one of the high tributes of turfdom. For grooms, trainers and jockeys, as a rule, shrink from familiarity with owners.

"No. 21," opening in speakeasy rendezvous, featuring backgrounding of creeping ivy—a decaying mansion with high iron fence-enclosing—to spread a magnetic influence to ambitious winners. Every new aspirant wants a niche in the once fashionable block of West 52nd, between Fifth and Sixth avenues.

The retirement of George Horace Lorimer from his long years of piloting the Saturday Evening Post removes one of the most colorful of the editorial chieftains. His strapping physique was somewhat reflected in a taste for robust stories of men with hairy chests rounding the Horn on wind jammers, prize fight tales by Socker Coe and heroic darings of Pitcairn Island.

Although he ran many tales with New York locale, he loathed the metropolis. He has not been here more than a half dozen times, in 30 years, then only between trains. When he visited Eastern sections that would ordinarily take him through the city he would go a roundabout way to escape contact.

Thingumbobs: The eldest son of Gene Fowler is exciting the critics with his sculpting, a head of his father winning especial praise. Adela Rogers St. Johns' idea of a corking time is to let the servants go and cook a meal for a dozen or so . . . Edsel Ford, driving himself, will never go more than 50.

'Tis a poor hand with the ladies because of being around them so little. Today, waiting in a comfortable chair in Macy's a rosebud in blue woolens toddled up, put a finger to lips pensively and gazed frankly. Finally: "Piggy back?"

When I put her down, she left without a word. I have a feeling I didn't get the proper jog into my piggy-backing.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Over in Germany the Nazi leaders beat the tom-tom of the old gods and of the only pure Aryans—themselves. Indifferent to the conclusions of science, Hitler and his aides claim the leadership of Europe because of purity of race.

But on what grounds is that claim based? Grounds as unstable as the running sands. There is no such thing, after a billion years of human life on earth and six thousand years of recorded history, as absolute purity of race.

The noted Professor J. B. Haldane offers some extremely interesting conclusions and speculations on the subject of race. He is not to be read as asserting there is any overlap among the great races, white, yellow, brown, black and red. No, they are sharply defined and distinct.

NO REAL OVERLAP

He does contend, though, that it is foolish to assert, as the German text books do, that a race is a group of men who are all alike in body and soul.

This is obvious nonsense. Among people who certainly belong in the same race there are large differences, both of body and soul.

Members of the same race are not exactly alike. They are not even as like as different members of the same animal breed say, White Wyandotte fowls, or Sealyham terriers. That does not mean that race is a word without meaning. Unfortunately, it means two different things.

On the one hand, if one take a thousand negroes and a thousand Europeans, the pakest Negro is darker than the swarthiest European. There is no overlap between the two groups and no doubt as to the race to which any closely man belongs.

On the other hand, if you take a thousand Swedes and a thousand Spaniards, shaped at random, no member of any other two groups within Europe, except perhaps the Lapps, you find a very different state of affairs. On the average, the Swedes will be much fairer skinned, rather than the Spaniards but the darkest Swede will certainly be darker than the fairest Spaniard and the shortest Swede far shorter than the average Spaniard.

Some anthropologists tried to get round these awkward facts by a beautiful theory it was supposed that long ago the population of Europe consisted of "pure" races, whose members were all closely alike and which did not overlap, any more than white men overlap with Negroes. This was a lovely theory but it was tested.

How do races originate and how do they change, apart from a mixture with other races?

One of the tenets of the German racial theorists is that racial characters are fixed, that the Germans today have the same essential characters as their ancestors who lived in forests two thousand years ago, and that the Jews do not differ from the men who followed Moses into the wilderness.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Yet, almost the only point on which evolutionists agree completely with fundamentalists who believe in every word of the book of Genesis is that all human races are descended from the same ancestors, and have since come to differ.

Professor Haldane believes that the question of race is becoming more and more important, and that the relations politically and morally of the various races, in the years to come, constitute probably the greatest of all world problems.

He notes a vast stirring of the Yellow Race, awakening from the drowse of centuries. He wonders if the white race is deteriorating. He asks what the United States will be doing in a century or two about its problems in black and white.

Interesting food for thought with no answers in sight.
